Gunmen Slay 1, Wound 1 in Capital Alley; Flee in Cars

Two Autos Block Escape From Shots

Machine Guns Believed Used; Victim's Father Vows Vengeance.

With a toll of one dead and another believed wounded in a flare of gangland warfare near the Government Printing Office late yesterday, special squads of police last night combed Washington's underworld in a fruitless search for a band of ruthless gunmen.

Charles W. Jones, 32, was killed in what police termed the climax of a "liquor war." He fell in a hail of lead fired from a speeding sedan. A companion with whom he was talking is mysteriously missing. He is believed to have been shot.

Two other men are being sought It was learned they escaped by ducking beneath parked automobiles.

Men Seek Shelter.

The men were trapped in Snow's court in the rear of the printing office. Soon after 6 p. m. two cars cruised slowly into the alley, one at either end. The men were standing at the entrance to a blind "L." One of the cars suddenly raced forward as bullets poured from a revolver of an invisible gunman on the rear seat.

With escape blocked, the men ran for shelter. Jones was cornered between a brick wall and a parked automobile. He fell with a bullet through the head. Witnesses said one of his companions was shot as he ran.

Threatened by Rivals.

Less than half an hour before the shooting, police learned, Jones and his companions had been threatened by members of a rival faction. They carried out the threats by returning to the alley with guns.

It was at first believed that Jones' brother, George, 28, was the unidentified wounded man. George, however, was located and denied being at the scene. He was questioned and released.

Police declared that the Jones brothers headed a well-known gang of liquor runners. Hijacking trouble with other gangs was believed motive for the murder. The shooting climaxed recent arguments between the two factions, authorities declared.

An outside gang element is involved in the shooting, police believed. They asserted at least two of the men were from a New Jersey liquor ring.

Machine Guns Believed Used.

Machine guns also were used in the shooting, police believe. Several slugs of a .45-caliber revolver were dug from brick walls and parked cars.

Lee H. De Doe, 30, of 211 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was held for investigation at the First Precinct Station. The right sleeve of his shirt was bloody. He told police he aided in taking Jones to Sibley Hospital.

Shortly after midnight, Myer

Veterans Rush For Ford Jobs

5,000 Storm Legion Post in Detroit; 800 Interviewed.

Detroit, Sept. 18 (AP).—Swarming out into the streets, paralyzing traffic for three blocks in Detroit's downtown section, a good-humored throng of veterans, estimated by police at 5,000, today answered the call of the Ford Motor Co. for employment of 5,000 war veterans, to be hired through the local American Legion Council.

Some of the veterans slept all night on the pavement in front of the American Legion Memorial Hall; others brought campstools, magazines and playing cards; hundreds milled about in lines guarded by police, awaiting their turn.

Rex Humphrey, commander of the Wayne County (Detroit) Council of the legion, who was authorized by the Ford Co. to hire the 5,000 veterans, said 800 were interviewed today. From this number, he said 300 will be selected for employment. Three hundred will be selected each day, he said, until the 5,000 quota is filled

Officials of the company said the hiring "had nothing at all to do with the company's position in the NRA."

Leg Broken as He Came Down Early Sunday.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 18 (AP).—Harold L. Neff, mail plane flier, who disappeared Saturday on the Toledo-Cleveland route, was found by farmers tonight in a marsh near Leoni, 8 miles east of here, and brought to Foote Hospital with a broken leg. He said he came down at 3 a. m. Sunday.

Farmers near Monroe, on Lake Erie, previously had reported hearing a plane flying low Saturday night.

Both Monroe and Leoni are far off the Toledo-Cleveland route.

Cubans Vote To Write New Constitution

Election for Convention Delegates Is Called for April 1.

Commission Will Draft Plan to Be Submitted Assembly May 20.

Havana, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The cabinet at an extraordinary session today voted to hold general elections April 1 for delegates to the constitutional assembly, which will rewrite the constitution along more liberal lines. The Assembly is to be convoked May 20.

President Ramon Grau San Martin ignored reference abroad that he was expected to resign before the end of the week.

The following cabinet alterations were made public: Secretary of Communications Gustavo Moreno becomes secretary of public works and temporarily secretary of agriculture. Secretary of Interior Antonio Guiteras is to assume the communications portfolio temporarily.

Moves to Palace.

President Grau San Martin, who has been living at his private residence, today began preparations for moving to the President's Palace—a move interpreted as indicating belief he will be in power indefinitely.

The president signed a decree repealing the law of military jurisdiction which permitted former President Gerardo Machado, now an exile in Canada, to carry many ordinary cases to the harsher military courts.

He also announced the cabinet intends to create a commission to draft a new constitution to serve as the basis for discussion at the constitutional assembly scheduled for next May. The plan is similar to that followed on the formation of a republic in Spain.

Fight Defeat.

Further complications to the administration came when the entire medical federation threatened a general strike unless a settlement is reached within 24 hours in their dispute with regional societies on procedure in dividing medical work. Authorities narrowly averted a strike of street car workers which threatened to tie up transportation.

Despite these recurrent crises and demands of boycott of American goods, the president told American press correspondents that the "prospects are excellent for an immediate settlement of the political situation."

Settlement Forecast.

Dr. Grau San Martin, asked about the 300 former army officers "interned" at the National Hotel for the past fortnight, said this prob-

Brand to Quit Office Oct. 1

Farms Coadministrator Resigns Under Fire to Resume Private Job.

Charles J. Brand, coadministrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, under heavy fire due to connection with the National Fertilizer Association, resigned yesterday, effective October 1.

Brand was charged with having never relinquished his post with the fertilizer organization. Recently his name appeared twice on a program announcement as speaker for the A. A. A., and as executive secretary of the fertilizer association. Since then the fight against him has increased.

In announcing his resignation, both Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and George N. Peek, chief administrator, praised Brand's work with the Government. His departure marks the first break in the A. A. A. since its organization in May.

Chester Davis, director of production for the administration, and a former Montana commissioner of agriculture, is said to be considered as Brand's successor.

Fascist Draft New Demands For Dollfuss

Ousting of War Minister, and Vice Chancellor Reported Sought

Vienna, Sept. 18 (AP).—A list of demands, including reorganization of the ministry, was reported drawn up today by leaders of the fascist Heimwehr meeting at Innsbruck.

Although there was no official confirmation, it was said the Heimwehr demanded resignation of War Minister Karl Vaugoin, ousting of Vice Chancellor Franz Winkler and other Agrarians, and appointment of Maj. Emil Fey, minister of security, as "Executive minister" with authority over the army, the police and the Gendarmerie.

It was reported the next step in Austria's political controversy would be submission of these demands to Chancellor Dollfuss.

Vice Chancellor Winkler has denounced the Fascist Heimwehr wing of the Dollfuss support by declaring "we are not going to fight the Nazis merely to help Austro-Fascism into the saddle."

Chancellor Dollfuss declined to say when the new constitution might be expected.

"We'll have to leave that to the commission which is drawing it up," he said. He is expected to return tomorrow from a week-end in the country.

Meanwhile, the official Heimwehr newspaper accused Winkler of trying to topple Dollfuss with "back-stabbing" methods, and Fey predicted "a still stronger wind is going to blow in Austria."

Statements from sources close to the chancellor intimated that it does not matter toward which form of government Austria is heading as long as it does not lead to Hitlerism.

Representatives of several nationalist groups will meet tomorrow to explore the possibilities of founding a "national front," aiming at absorption of the outlawed Nazis, with an anti-Jewish platform and the slogan of peace with Germany.

Vaugoin told the troops at Salzburg Garrison tonight there is no misunderstanding in the government.

They have been released under $50,000 bonds, charged with attempting to dispose of the stolen furs, receiving stolen property and robbery.

League Looks To Roosevelt For Closer Tie

Vast Extension of U. S. Cooperation Is Said to Be Purpose.

(Copyright, 1933, by United Press.)

Geneva, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt is preparing drastic extension of United States' cooperation with the League of Nations, it was learned tonight.

The President plans to "regularize" Washington's relations with the league, originally sponsored by Woodrow Wilson, the last Democratic President in the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt is said to plan appointment of a prominent diplomatic representative at Geneva as his regular post.

The plan also includes establishment of a League of Nations division in the Department of State, it was understood, probably in charge of an Undersecretary of State.

Three Steps Possible.

Persons close to the Roosevelt administration assert this new United States-League alliance may take one of three forms:

Appointment of Prentiss Gilbert as U. S. commissioner general to the league.

This tendency toward full cooperation between the United States and the league has grown with remarkable rapidity since the inauguration of the Roosevelt Democratic regime in Washington, diplomats here pointed out.

The designation of Davis as Mr. Roosevelt's personal representative, with a roving ambassadorial commission, was regarded as the first step toward complete reversion of America's traditional policy of "splendid isolation" in world affairs and a turning toward the league.

Expect Liberal Policy.

Furthermore, with a Democratic President in power again for the first time since the end of the Wilson regime after the World War, European statesmen looked forward to a resumption at Washington of Wilsonian liberal policies in world affairs.

Hope still rises in league quarters the Roosevelt program of world cooperation might lead the newest Democratic regime into full membership in the league which Wilson sponsored. Whether the President would be willing to return to that struggle, in which Wilson failed, remained conjectural.

His willingness to go as far as possible without asking Congress to sanction full membership in the league, however, was seen as adding greatly to the body's world prestige and officials were optimistic that it presaged America's subsequent formal joining of the league.

Visit Significant.

Significance also was attached to the visit in Geneva of H. H. Railey, new director of the United States League of Nations Associations, who has been consulting league officials regarding the forthcoming campaign to get the United States to enter the league formally.

Geneva Report Unverified.

Geneva reports of impending American participation in the league are not taken seriously by State Department officials. They have had before them, however, league-originated proposals for increased cooperation looking to American entry into the league.

While Secretary of State Hull looks favorably upon plans for closer cooperation, league representatives have not been able to gain President Roosevelt's support of any plan that would invite another Senate storm on this issue.

During his stay in London and after his return from the economic conference Hull was importuned to support a plan to have a permanent American representative at the league in Geneva.

State Department officials ascribe the present Geneva reports to this merely tentative plan.

Columbiana, Ala., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—A young woman picked up three of ten convicts escaping from Shelby County jail today, eluded police in her speedy automobile and sped from town.

The woman, Sheriff Knox Wooley learned, waited in the shadows of the jail wall for the break, effected it was believed, by use of a pass key she had smuggled into the prison.

Two of the ten convicts were Pratt Northcutt, 30 and Ernest Powell, 29, long-term prisoners brought here to testify in circuit court this week.

They were visited by an attractive woman Sunday. The visitor talked with Northcutt and Powell for some time, her face pressed close to the cell bars. She was alone and drove her own car from the jail yard after her visit.

The other seven men in today's break, four of whom were colored, apparently made good their escape. They separated, witnesses said, and fled on foot into the town.

Roosevelt Signs Coal Code; Bars Explanation Of Collective Bargaining

U. S. Refuses To Halt Navy Building Plan

The United States will not alter or modify its $238,000,000 naval building plan.

This was made plain yesterday after Secretary of State Hull had definitely denied reports from abroad that Great Britain had urged this country to abandon its program.

Foreign powers have been pictured here as inclined to regard the American warship construction program as a threat to success of the Geneva Arms Conference.

Observers conversant with British naval policy considered it probable that London had suggested only the suspension of work on the 10,000-ton, 6-inch gun cruisers recently ordered. Britain favors a reduction in the unit tonnage of large cruisers and it is known would be pleased if the United States would devote its remaining cruiser tonnage under the London treaty to vessels of about 7,000 tons.

Position of British.

The British are understood to feel that if the United States builds its full quota of 10,000-ton ships it will, by 1935, when the next naval conference meets, have so many of them that the British and Japanese can not consider their deletion from future building programs.

Meanwhile, in Paris, President Roosevelt assumed the limelight of the opening session of the Three-Power Arms Conference. He relayed a brusk message through Norman Davis, "roving ambassador," demanding action on arms cuts or regulation.

Davis denied Mr. Roosevelt had any arms plan of his own, but intimated he was ready to cooperate fully with France and Great Britain, the other two powers at these conversations.

Davis said far from bringing any so-called "Roosevelt plan" for arms limitation to the Paris parleys, his chief job would be to learn what the French and British want. He has been in London for the last several weeks conferring frequently with the British—and said he was in France to confer with the French.

Must Stop Quibbling

Davis brought Mr. Roosevelt's message to the French—a message he had delivered to Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, in Lon-

Clement Chase Killed by Fall

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (AP).—Clement E. Chase, 45, widely known bridge engineer, fell 120 feet to his death today from one of the spans he helped to design.

Assistant chief engineer of the Delaware River Bridge, between Philadelphia and Camden, N. J., he was clambering beneath the roadway, planning a $10,000,000 high speed transit line, at the time of the accident.

Chase had shared in the designing of bridges in New York, Alaska, Detroit and New Orleans. Lately he was consulting engineer on the New Orleans structure to span the Mississippi.

Chase, born in Omaha, was a member of Modjeski, Masters and Chase, of New York.

Chase was believed to have lost his balance due to a gust of wind.

(United Press.)

An inflation program to pump $400,000,000 in new currency into circulation was demanded last night in a resolution adopted by a conference of Southern cotton planters and legislators.

The conference also demanded a Government guarantee of 20 cents a pound for cotton next year, with a maximum crop of 9,000,000 bales and threatened a "selling strike" by cotton farmers if both demands were not met.

The resolution, adopted after a day of heated speeches, climaxed the long fight of Senators Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, and Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, for a cheaper dollar as the only hope of the debt-ridden farmer.

Cheered by 200.

Thomas, who acted as chairman of the resolutions committee, drew cheers from his 200 listeners when he read the following paragraphs:

"Be it resolved, That we respectfully petition you, the President of the United States, immediately to take steps for the inflation or expansion of the currency, which power was granted to you by the last Congress to meet just such emergencies as now exist; that such a step is immediately necessary for the recovery of the price of cotton and all other farm products and to restore the buying power of the farmer.

"To bring about an immediate increase in commodity prices we suggest and recommend that you use the power conferred to issue and place in circulation United States notes. In support of such recommendation and petition we call your attention to the following facts:

Recalls Days of 60's.

"The Nation, in an emergency in the sixties, authorized, issued and placed in circulation some $400,000,000 in United States notes. Such notes, although not based on interest bearing bonds, were in fact based upon all the property and taxing power of the Government, and that of the said $400,000,000 worth of said notes the sum of $346,000,000 is still in active circulation.

"We call your attention further to the fact that through the issuance of such noninterest bearing notes the people to date have saved more than $11,000,000 in interest alone."

Connolly Death Probed at Boston

Boston, Sept. 18 (AP).—While funeral services were held today for John J. Connolly, jr., 27, Boston College graduate and a chemistry instructor at Georgetown University, Washington, police opened an investigation into his death.

Connolly died at the Haymarket Relief Hospital Thursday after his arrest with two other men on a charge of drunkenness. An autopsy revealed a fractured skull, unsuspected before death. Police inspectors said they would question Connolly's two companions.

Connolly was graduated from Boston College in 1927 and took a degree at Holy Cross in Worcester.

Leaders of Labor Accept Provisions and Pledge Hearty Suport.

Alabama, West Kentucky Operators Obdurate in Refusal to Sign.

President Roosevelt late yesterday approved a code for the bituminous coal industry, adding to those highly competitive groups already under the NRA.

Language interpreting the collective bargaining provisions of the recovery law was sticken from the code by the President, who said that such interpretations should not be permitted in codes because they led to confusion and misunderstanding.

Some of the men assert they will not return to work until assured a 6-hour day. Others predict early return to the mines.

The statement of the President, incoporated in the executive order making the coal code effective October 2, was in line with previous White House statements and confirmed the declaration of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, that no other codes would contain qualifying labor language as was permitted in the automobile code.

Congratulates All.

The President signed the executive order in his study, where he had remained during the day because of a cold.

"I congratulate you all," the President told Gen. Johnson, Kenneth M. Simpson, deputy administrator, and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of NRA.

Elimination of the interpretative provisions of the code came a short while before the labor advisory board of the NRA met to consider protests against the language filed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

With the objectionable provisions eliminated labor representatives accepted the code with pledges of earnest support.

"The United Mine Workers of America will accept the code and make every effort to assure its successful operation," Mr. Lewis said.

"The American Federation of Labor will cooperate with the United Mine Workers of America in making the code effective," Mr. Green said. "We are especially pleased to note paragraph (b) has been eliminated."

Appendix B in Code.

Appendix "B" was a joint statement issued some time ago by Gen. Johnson and Mr. Richberg on the collective bargaining provisions of the law. It was incorporated in the code.

"This is the greatest accomplishment of the Administration" Gen. Johnson said. "This was a pretty tough baby. When we started to get this industry together, it was in a state of utter disorganization. There were 28 different codes sub-

Jury Selected In Kidnap Trial

Oklahoma City, Sept. 18 (AP). Twelve small-town business men and farmers were chosen tonight to hear the trial of 11 men and 1 woman in the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, one of the oil country's richest men.

The jury, with two alternates added, was selected in the tense setting of Judge Edgar S. Vaught's small courtroom atop the new Federal Tower, where entrances and exits were under muzzles of submachine guns and shotguns in the hands of deputies.

Especial watch was kept over the two principal captives, Harvey Bailey and Albert Bates. These, accused of being the "brains" and the "muscle" with the missing George (Machine Gun) Kelly, in the abduction, were nonchalant.

The Shannons, R. G. (Boss), Wise County, Tex., farmer; his plain middle-aged wife and his 17-year-old son, Armon, apparently paid little attention to the proceedings. Their attorney indicated he will claim they were coerced into harboring criminals and holding Urschel on their farm.

Miners Delay Giving Praise To Coal Code

Strikers, Uncertain of Terms, Wait to See Results.

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 18 (AP).—Thirty thousand striking miners in the Connellsville coke region tonight received with mingled emotions the news that President Roosevelt signed the coal code.

Business men, their trade almost at a standstill due to the strike, were more jubilant than the miners, who were uncertain of many terms of the code.

Some strike leaders expressed the belief that the Government "will see the code put into operation fairly." Others like Martin F. Ryan, who have been seeking a $6 six-hour day, reserved comment.

Unionism Criterion.

A large group of coal diggers seemed to think that if the code means union recognition, it is satisfactory. Al Pecossky, a mine leader employed by the $75,000,000 H. C. Frick Coke Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, voiced the opinion of one section, saying:

"It means we stay out to October 2, when the code goes into effect and when we feel certain and sure the Government will see it is fairly operated."

Pecossky averages $4.50 a day.

Sees Labor Victory.

Andrew Rayner, president of the Gates Local, where 16 miners and a deputy sheriff were wounded Thursday in a clash, said:

"It means that we have won our fight. The fact that Frick has not signed the code cuts no ice with us. The President has signed and the Frick Co. will be no exception."

At Pricedale, 40 miles away, where leaders of the 70 union locals voted a week ago to call out their 32,500 members on a "holiday," Reese Trigg, Negro president of the local, said:

Unrest Continues.

Reese, a coal loader, averages between $2 and $3 a day while working, receiving 27½ cents a ton. He added he would "gladly work day rates, six days a week on the $4.60 scale" rather than on tonnage. He did not know exactly how the code would affect his earnings.

Considerable unrest was reported in Somerset County, where 5,000 miners are demanding a "living wage" while operators are understood to have obtained an appointment with President Roosevelt or Gen. Hugh S. Johnson for next Thursday. In the code the wage scale was left open for Somerset.

Coal operators are refusing to comment.

Pickets and Miners Battle.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 18 (AP).—New violence in the Scranton anthracite miners' strike was marked today by a bombing, clashes between pickets and miners, wounding of a boy, and destruction of 20 workers' automobiles.

Dynamite damaged the home of William J. Brennan, former president of District 1, United Mine Workers of America.

In North Scranton Alexander Horwath, 17, was wounded in the cheek as workmen and pickets fought.

Automobiles of 20 workmen, who were in a mine at Dickson City, were wrecked by a crowd which swarmed into the mine property.

don. The Presidential message, it was understood, assured both MacDonald and the French of Mr. Roosevelt's unflagging interest in the question of world armaments and his conviction that a disarmament agreement was of vital importance to economic recovery in every country.

He finally expressed America's willingness to cooperate fully in any practical manner—but warned he would walk out of the conference unless the other powers stopped quibbling.

The preliminary arms conference meets October 16, and even then its only function is to draw up a draft arms cuts or regulation treaty, which is to be submitted "as the basis for discussion" at a subsequent world arms conference, which formally will be empowered to approve an arms treaty.

Detroit Banks Held Solvent When Closed

One-Man Grand Jury Also Denies "Smart Money" Was Withdrawn.

Detroit, Sept. 18 (AP).—Judge Harry B Keidan, who for three months conducted a one-man grand jury investigation of the collapse of Detroit's two national banks, tonight found the banks were solvent at the time of the Michigan banking holiday, and there was no evidence of criminality by bank officers.

He also found there was no evidence of "smart money" withdrawals just prior to the holiday, after which the First National-Detroit and the Guardian National Bank of Commerce failed to open.

Senator James Couzens testified secret reports by examiners to the Treasury Department, some months before the holiday, showed the banks in bad condition.

But Judge Keidan, in his finding made public tonight, said: "I am constrained to find that the two national banks on February 11, 1933, were solvent."

Slight Cold Keeps Roosevelt in Bed

(Associated Press.)

Lieut. Comdr. Ross T. McIntire, Naval physician, suggested the day of relaxation when he noted a mild fever, but expressed no concern whatever over the President's condition.

The President, is expected to return to his desk today when he meets in regular session with the recovery council.

There was little urgent business yesterday to command the President's attention. He conferred only with Secretary Woodin, cancelling all other engagements.

Roosevelt Signs Coal Trade Code

mitted and considered at the public hearing.

"We were confronted by several fiercely competitive groups. At one time we were on the verge of a general strike."

Increased retail prices will result from the code, Gen. Johnson said.

"The industry couldn't pay the code wages without increased prices," he said.

Increases in prices of stored coal are not justified, he said, in reply to questions. He refused to forecast how much prices would increase, but previously had said he wouldn't disapprove advances as high as $2 a ton.

Elimination of the collective bargaining interpretation provisions would not interfere with acceptance by the operators, Gen. Johnson said.

Representatives of the Alabama and Kentucky operators remained without the fold. They have refused to sign.

"They're in the class with Henry Ford?" Gen. Johnson was asked.

"Yes, except in their case there probably are violations of the code provisions," he replied.

Other modifications made by the President authorized him to appoint not more than three members of the bituminous industrial board in addition to or in substitution for one or more of the aforesaid six members of the divisional code authorities, created to administer the code; required submission of data by companies, and authorized him to fix basic wage rates still under negotiation.

Mr. Lewis said the wage agreements virtually had been completed.

Name's 'Grau'

President of Cuba Willing for Headlines to Leave Off "San Martin."

Havana, Sept. 18 (AP).—President Ramon Grau San Martin sees no reason why American newspaper headline writers shouldn't abbreviate his lengthy Spanish name.

He's quite willing to have them use merely "Grau." In fact, he signs almost everything "Ramon Grau," as that's quicker and easier than writing out the full name.

"Here we usually employ both our father's and mother's surnames," the president said today. "My father's name was Grau and my mother's San Martin, so that my full name would be Ramon Grau y San Martin. However, I do not write in the 'y.'"

U. S. Guards Trend of New Cuban Parleys

Policy of Government May Hinge on Result of Conference.

(Associated Press.)

American diplomatic chiefs last night kept close watch for results from conversations in Havana between the island's political leaders upon which may hinge the United States's Cuban policy.

Secretary Hull had a full report of a conference between Ambassador Welles and Provisional President Grau San Martin. Holding it highly confidential, the Secretary said more information was desired before any action was taken.

Expecting momentarily a break in the situation that would lead either toward stability or new political difficulties, State Department officials kept silent as to the significance of the moves afoot.

Intimation was given that public comment upon affairs behind the scenes would be construed in Cuba as meaning American interference.

Receipt of word here that Grau San Martin had indicated he might surrender office if this would aid Cuba, drew no verbal reaction from the State Department.

Montreal, Sept. 18 (AP).—Gerardo Machado, former President of Cuba, now in retirement here, will stay in Montreal for another month and then probably move to Florida, Julius Brown, his spokesman said today.

Lindys Plan Return Trip

He and Mrs. Lindbergh spent the night at Karlskronae, and expected to start for Leningrad in the morning. They obtianed Russian visas here prior to departing yesterday on the first phase of their leisurely journey back to New York, by way of Europe.

Lindbergh also arranged his permit to fly over Soviet Russian territories and land in Russia, where he expects to remain some time conferring with Soviet aviation authorities.

The Lindbergs probably will proceed to Moscow from Leningrad. Reports that they might proceed on across Siberia to China and Japan, returning thence by boat, were unconfirmed.

Their tentative itinerary was understood to be back to Berlin from Moscow, and thence to Scotland via Holland, sailing from Scotland to New York.

Bloodshed and charges of fraud, coercion and ballot buying have marked Cuba's elections in recent years.

A slim vote was recorded at the last general election, November 1, 1932, when the island selected half of the House of Representatives, two senators and provincial and municipal officers.

Scores were injured and one person slain in the primary balloting of February 28, 1932. This election was hailed as the first step toward reorganization of the three political parties, Liberals, Conservatives and Populars.

Delegates were elected to the municipal assemblies, which were empowered to nominate candidates for local offices and choose members of provincial assemblies.

The latter elected delegates to the national convention as a preliminary to the November voting.

Outbreaks were few when Cuba reelected Machado to office on November 1, 1932. This was because he was unopposed, having been agreed upon months earlier by the divergent political elements.

Davis on Trial For 2d Time In Moose Case

Senator and Aid Charged With Violations of Lottery Laws.

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Retrial of U. S. Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, on Federal lottery charges growing out of the conduct of a "charity ball" by a fraternal order, opened today. The first trial a year ago ended in a mistrial.

Davis, former Cabinet officer and director general of the Loyal Order of Moose, listened alertly as a jury was selected.

The senator underwent an emergency appendicitis operation last spring, and his trial was postponed when complications ensued.

He spent his convalescence, he said, writing a book on strikes.

"I studied every strike back for a hundred years, and I just finished the book last week," he said. "It did me a lot of good."

The charges involve the alleged shipment of lottery tickets in interstate commerce, and alleged conspiracy in connection with social functions by the Moose in 1930 and 1931.

Ickes Answers Texas Oil Kick

Secretary Again Denies He Plans to Use Power to Fix Prices.

(Associated Press.)

A protest against the oil code's price-fixing provision brought word from Secretary of the Interior Ickes last night that he had no "present intention" of using those powers.

Secretary Ickes replied to a telegram which the Texas Independent Refiners Association had sent to President Roosevelt, charging they would be ruined by certain gasoline prices they were informed were to be fixed. The Secretary said he had fixed no prices and that the refiners' information was incorrect. Neither the telegram nor the Secretary's reply was made public.

Well-informed sources still believed that prices would be fixed eventually and pointed out that the Secretary had left the way open, so he could move in any direction at any time.

The Secretary addressed the planning committee yesterday, reporting "notable improvement" in the oil industry and urging that care be taken so "too great a burden is not placed too suddenly on the purchasing power of the public."

Hurricane Batters Ward Line Vessel

Havana, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Ward liner Orizaba, badly battered during 40 hours of fighting hurricane winds between Havana and New York, reached port today and continued on to Mexico, after disembarking nine passengers.

Sailing from New York Wednesday, the Orizaba was due here Saturday. It was delayed both by the winds, which reached an estimated velocity of 120 miles an hour, and by the fact that it turned back on its course to avoid the storm.

Damage to the boat was estimated unofficially at $40,000.

Historic Aquia Church, Over Which Battle Rages

Here is Aquia Episcopal Church in Stafford County, Va., proposed remodeling of which brought threats of a shotgun defense and calling out of the Marines by angry parishioners. The church is the third oldest in Virginia.

Aquia Episcopal Women in Stafford County Breathe Easier.

Grimly determined their beloved church shall not be "desecrated," a group of women has won a significant step in its fight to prevent remodeling of Aquia Episcopal Church, in Stafford County, Va.

It took threats of a shotgun defense and a report of mobilization of Marines, but the trick was turned and now the militant women parishioners are in a happier frame of mind. Reports have it the rector's wife declared she would arm herself and guard the chancel against trowels and mortar.

It was said Maj. Charles Gilchrist, retired officer and ardent foe of the changes, would bring 40 Leathernecks to stand off workmen. A truckload of Marines did go through Aquia one day, when feeling was at its highest pitch.

Lone Constable to Seize Marines.

A lone county constable stood ready to arrest the two score sea soldiers when they appeared. They moved on though and he was spared this arduous task.

Partial victory came Friday for the militant women of the congregation, when the Rev. Henry Heaton, rector of Aquia, was notified by the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Bishop of Virginia, recommendations were being made that the proposed new altar be not installed. The decision followed a conference in Richmond between church dignitaries, a trustee of the Aquia maintenance fund and remodeling contractors.

This particular battle goes back two years when the vestry decided to replace the concrete floor with flagstones of Indiana sandstone; replace the flooring of pulpit and chancel with white marble; remodel the pulpit and install beneath it a robing room; remove the Sacred Table from the chancel and replace it with a modern altar, necessitating removal from reredos of several decorative panels.

The project, abandoned when indignation broke out among older communicants, was resumed only recently. Work actually was started, although signatures of 49 of the 84 communicants were procured, the petition asking changes not be made. An appeal then was sent to Bishop Tucker, in which the D. A. R. and the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities joined.

Pulpit Precipitates Fight.

Replacement of the old three-stage "wineglass" pulpit, which has only one counterpart in this country, was a sore spot with the fighting women parishoners. The pulpit's lower level is the reading stand and the upper, reached by a winding staircase, is the pulpit proper. There was an aperture in the rear, through which the chancel could be seen and which gave the structure the appearance of being supported only by the base of the wineglass stem. This aperture has been closed, the upper landing of the staircase is being changed in form and a robing room installed under the pulpit.

Aquia is the third oldest Episcopal Church in Virginia. It was built like a maltese cross of brick brought from England and is in an almost perfect state of preservation. Overwharton Parish, in which it is situated, was established in 1738. The original church was erected in 1751, destroyed by fire three years later and rebuilt in 1757.

Remodeling Given Up as Older Communicants Voice Indignation.

Theaters Ask Longer Hours

Rule Sought to Permit Midnight Shows on Saturday.

Prospect of liberalized police regulations on theater closing hours appeared bright yesterday as the District Commissioners pondered a modification request from the Motion Picture Theater Owners Association.

The owners ask permission for midnight shows on Saturday night. They are permitted to remain open from 2 p. m. to 11 p. m. Sundays. They ask that the closing time be 12 midnight.

The Commissioners are said to favor modification. Only theaters would benefit by the change. Midnight shows started on Saturday would be permitted to run until 2 a. m. Sunday under modification.

Why Is a Tropical Hurricane? Weather Students Seek Answer Bureau Group Can Explain Why One Goes This Way and One Goes That.

(Associated Press.)

While they don't know the root of these storms, they know plenty about their habits—how they act after they've started in a low pressure area, and what causes them to go one course or another.

Most of these tropical disturbances originate far out in the Atlantic, some as far eastward as the Cape Verde Islands, off the coast of Africa, and their course depends on what barometric conditions they encounter.

They follow the course of least resistance and high pressure areas shut them aside to areas where pressure is lower.

Storms often gain in fury over the water, but the land diminishes their intensity. The obstructions of the land have something to do with that and then there are other reasons involving temperature and humidity.

There have been more storms this season than normal, Weather Bureau officials said, and the season is not over. Roughly it is from June to October, inclusive.

Sometimes, the disturbances occur in late May or early November, but that is exceptional.

Chicago Loop Fires Laid To Escaped Pyromaniac

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP).—Seeking the incendiarist responsible for 35 fires in the Loop since August 10, police were searching for William A. Burnett, 22, of Springfield, W. Va., a pyromaniac who escaped August 1 from the Ohio State Hospital at Columbus.

Sally Sallies

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP).—The world must wait until Friday to get a judicial decision on a "battle" during which Sally Rand, fan dancer, allegedly bit the hand that helped feed her.

Sally entered the woman's court today and displayed a bruise near her right eye, caused, she said, by the fist of Sam Balkin, night club manager.

Balkin showed marks on a wrist where Sally clamped her teeth, he charged, in a scuffle concerning the dancer's salary. Balkin and Sally are seeking each other's arrest on assault charges.

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Caught in a howling storm at sea with no means of communicating to the rest of the world, passengers aboard the steamship Morro Castle passed a fearful night singing and praying, trying not to think of disaster.

The passengers, debarking today, told how Gwendolyn Taylor, 22, a blonde business girl of Philadelphia, thumped away at a piano all Friday night to keep up their spirits when the ship was heeling sharply against the crashing waves. The ship's orchestra was too sick to play.

"I thought I ought to do something," said Miss Taylor, "as I was one of the few women who weren't sick. The only thing I could do was play, so I played, and sang, too. I think some of the women wanted to hear hymns, but I thought they needed jazz more. Some of them joined in the singing, and some of them continued to pray."

The Morro Castle left Havana Wednesday night, and Capt. Robert R. Willmott said he had hoped to outrun the hurricane, but a northerly gale came up when the ship was off Cape Hatteras and the storm was on.

Capt. Willmott said it was the worst blow he had ever been through.

Wagner Urges Strike Truces

(Associated Press.)

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, chairman of the National Labor Board, appealed to employes and employers alike last night in a radio broadcast to avoid industrial disputes, and bring their troubles to the board, if necessary, for peaceful settlement.

The board was created by President Roosevelt to prevent strikes and lockouts from interfering with the NRA program, and Wagner cited in an address the "unanimity of opinion of its seven members in deciding all of the cases which have come before it" as the spirit in which the board is working.

The chairman asserted that not only must minimum wages provided for in NRA codes be pushed upward, but that employes on the higher levels must receive proportionately more.

"Despite the successes thus far," Wagner said, "the National Labor Board can not be very useful as an agency of last resort unless employers and employes conduct themselves properly in the preliminary stages of their dealings with each other.

"Let me emphasize that the National Labor Board can not force a single person to appear in Washington. It can not issue summonses, and it will not swing a club. I entreat them to make full use of the organization which the President has created for the establishment of industrial peace on terms beneficial to all."

Poland, Danzig, Agree On Trade Reciprocity

Warsaw, Sept. 18 (AP).—Governments of Poland and the Danzig territory today signed an agreement under which the free city of Danzig and the Polish port of Gdynia will receive equal treatment on a basis of free competition.

Foreign minister Joseph Beck will leave tomorrow for an official visit to Paris prior to journeying to Geneva.

Shillalah!

Mrs. Murphy Puts Five Ale Smashers to Rout, Begorrah!

Dundalk, Irish Free State, Sept. 18 (AP).—Raiders who have been smashing stocks of British ale in sections of the Free State found more than they bargained for today when they tried to break into Thomas Murphy's saloon. They found Mrs. Murphy.

"I couldn't use anything more Irish," Mrs. Murphy said. "I gave them plenty of it—and don't you think they were looking for it."

Repeal to Face Court; 2 States Ballot Today;

Validity Test Announced as New Mexico, Idaho Prepare to Vote.

(Associated Press.)

Amid final campaign flourishes in two States in preparation for voting today on prohibition repeal, Canon William Sheafe Chase said yesterday a court test was in prospect on the validity of [illegible] votes already rolled up.

Twenty-nine States have voted. New Mexico and Idaho ballot tomorrow.

Canon Chase, superintendent of the International Reform Federation, said the constitutionality of previous votes would be challenged.

He would not say where the action would be started, but said proceedings would be filed against the secretary of some State that has not voted to ascertain "on what authority he expects to waste public funds upon an unconstitutional election."

"It will test the constitutionality of the acts of 29 States which have voted wet," he added, "and probably will result in pronouncing them null and void."

Missouri and Nevada notified the State Department today of ratification of the repeal amendment, bringing to 22 the formal notices thus far received in Washington from States that have approved repeal.

Idaho Drys Confident.

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 18 (AP).—With fair weather in prospect for tomorrow's repeal election in Idaho, dry leaders were encouraged at the prospect of a heavy rural vote.

Robert H. McCracken, of Boise, chairman of the allied drys, predicted a vote of more than 100,000, with "well over 50,000 of them" opposing repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

William Healy, one of the repeal candidates for delegate to the ratification convention, predicted a maximum vote of 75,000, of which he estimated 45,000 would be for repeal and 30,000 against.

Senator William E. Borah declined to comment on the election other than to say, "The people of the State know my views."

New Mexico Votes Today.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Sept. 18 (AP).—With the question of limiting property tax levies to 20 mills almost outweighing the prohibition issue, New Mexico voters will decide tomorrow whether the State shall join the National repeal parade.

Bride Ponders Rum Sale Plan

Scheme of Rufus S. Lusk Reported Favored by District Officials.

The plan of Rufus S. Lusk, national legislative officer of the Crusaders, for regulation of liquor sales in the District has received unofficial approval at the District Building, it was learned yesterday.

Several officials commented favorably upon the scheme, but said they did not wish to be quoted.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride has been asked to make a general study of plans for control following repeal. He said the Lusk plan would be considered.

Already the Commissioners have had requests for licenses for sale of "hard liquor." One communication asking for information in regard to regulations for distilleries, bonded warehouses and rectifying plants was received yesterday from a California distilling firm.

Lusk is to submit his plan to Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, prior to the opening of Congress.

The plan calls for licensing of a limited dividend dispensing corporation under control of three commissioners.

Tokyo (Tuesday), Sept. 19 (AP).—George H. Tinkham, Massachusetts representative, hopped off from the Tokyo Airport today for Mukden, Manchuria, planning an eight-day aerial tour of Manchukuo.

He is believed to be the first American legislator to visit the new state since its foundation.

Industries Exhibit Opens With Obligato by German Band.

The Rivers Rhine and Danube figuratively leaped an ocean and changed their courses last night as Washington brewers gathered at their beer industries exhibit on the tenth floor of the Raleigh Hotel.

The brewers heard experts on refrigeration and serving discuss and contrast modern and prewar eras and methods in beer serving. All the while the taps were pulled and a little German band, in red student caps, tooted Teutonic melodies.

R. B. Ambrose, veteran expert on the art of serving beer, traced beer from its origin in Egypt, 2,000 years before the Christian era, to the advent of America's 3.2.

"The modern server of beer lacks the finesse, the skill of the old-timer, whose mustaches drooped as mournfully as his lips curved upward cheerfully," Ambrose said. "Beer today is being served by people who do it as a sideline, and are actually soda fountain clerks or restaurateurs."

It's Smoother Now.

J. K. Knight, refrigeration man, told the brewers they are "satisfying America's thirst properly and wholesomely after 13 years of drought."

Paul Kaiser, brewmaster, said changes in brewing methods have produced smoother taste in beer.

Abner Drury jr., brewer, told of the development, decline and resurrection of beer in the District.

The bills included one $100 bill, two $20 bills and others $5 notes.

Court Orders Mellon Taxes Briefs Filed

Arguments Submitted in $5,000,000 Income Levy Suit.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 18 (AP).—Judge R. M. Gibson heard arguments today on demurrers filed by W. L. Mellon and five associate officers of the Gulf Oil Corporation to suits seeking recovery of $5,000,000, which they are alleged to owe the Government for income taxes from 1926 to 1930.

The actions were brought by Albert R. Knight, of Lansdowne, Pa., and Davis A. Olson, of Washington. In the event of a verdict against the Mellon group, Knight and Olson would receive one-half.

William Watson Smith, defense attorney, told the court the suits do not rest on Federal statute and that the Government had not joined in them. He asserted the actions do not have the sanction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Charles A. Russell, counsel for Knight and Olson, maintained the rights of action had lain dormant for years and the purpose of the law under which the suits were filed is to permit citizens to act if the Government is negligent.

The judge ordered both sides to file briefs and adjourned the hearing, pending their consideration.

Waterway Treaty Due, Shipstead Believes

(Associated Press.)

A prediction that the St. Lawrence waterway treaty with Canada would be ratified by the Senate at the next session of Congress was made yesterday by Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota.

"I find the Roosevelt administration's attitude highly gratifying," he said. "The President's determination to have the treaty ratified at the next session of the Senate assures Senate approval. This, in my opinion, is the greatest farm relief program so far inaugurated, as it affects 23 States of the Middle West and along the Great Lakes."

Austin Fears "Direct Action"

Reshaping Judiciary Only Needed to Overthrow U. S., He Says.

Burlington, Vt., Sept. 18 (AP).—Senator Warren R. Austin, (R.) today said "only one step further need be taken to destroy the Constitution and overthrow the Government."

The Senator made the statement in an address which marked observance of "Constitution Day." he said, "we are witnessing the abandonment of representative government for direct action, the breaking down of the sovereignty of States by Federal usurpation, and abandonment of the Legislative branch to the executive of its exclusive power and duty to legislate. Only one step further need be taken to destroy the Constitution and overthrow the Government, namely, to remold the judiciary.

"It is a patriotic duty to make the diversion from American institutions, which we are experimenting with now, temporary."

Methodists Laud Plan Pursued for Recovery

Canton, Ohio, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Roosevelt Administration was commended "for seeking to regulate rather than change economic procedure" in a report presented to the Northeast Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here today.

The report, prepared by the social service commission, expressed belief "that the greatest problems in national recovery lie ahead."

Power Cooperation Pledged.

Keep Schools Open, Slogan Of P.-T. Body

National Board in Session Here Sounds Keynote at First Meeting.

"Keep the schools open" was the keynote of the first meeting yesterday of the four-day session of the National board of managers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers at the Wardman Park Hotel.

"First, we must cooperate with educators and, second, develop community consciousness on the needs of schools," said Mrs. E. L. Baker, State president of Minnesota, addressing board members, who represent 20,000 local associations.

This is the first step in a plan to combat impaired efficiency due to low pay of teachers and increase of 2,000,000 new students under the NRA.

Definite plans to keep the schools open are expected later in the sessions.

Washington members of special committees which met yesterday included Mrs. William T. Bannerman, legislation; Joy Elmer Morgan, publications; Miss Charl Williams, nominating committee; Miss Alida Bowler, juvenile protection; Miss Ellen C. Lombard, home education, and Miss Adelaide Baylor, homemaking.

Educators will sit with the National board at its semiannual dinner tonight. Dr. George F. Zook, United States Commissioner of Education, and the Hon. Sarah Lee Fain, NRA speaker, will deliver addresses.

Jean Harlow Elopes to Wed

Camera Man Third Mate of Platinum Blond in Yuma Nuptials.

Hollywood, Sept. 18 (AP).—Jean Harlow, the screen's platinum blond, was married for the third time today, in an early morning airplane elopement to Yuma, Ariz., with Harold G. Rosson, film cameraman.

The 22-year-old star and her 38-year-old husband, flying back to Hollywood shortly after the ceremony, said they would return to work tomorrow at Culver City.

Miss Harlow said she may go to Mexico for a picture, and if so, that will be their honeymoon trip.

After the suicide of Miss Harlow's second husband, Paul Bern, movie executive, on Labor Day, 1932, Rosson was seen frequently in her company.

Rosson was at the camera when Miss Harlow played the lead in "Red-Headed Woman." Since then Rosson has filmed her in "Red Dust" and "Hold Your Man."

Miss Harlow's first husband was Charles McGrew 2d, wealthy Chicago broker, with whom she eloped in 1927 to Waukegan, Ill.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-mark Applied For)

By Morgan Baker

Three members of the Federal Diary popularity contest party as they alighted from an airliner Monday night after a wonderful vacation in Chicago as guests of The Post. Copilot C. W. Weiblem (extreme left) and Pilot H. L. Smith (peeping over shoulder) brought Mrs. Rose Myles, her daughter, Miss Beulah Myles, and Francis O. Panneton to a three-point landing.

DEFINITE orders to "ameliorate and improve conditions for all Government employes at once" are being undertaken by new officers of the American Federation of Government Employes.

BAKER.

They will strive to enroll every eligible Federal employe and official. Every congressional district in the country will be canvassed and all affiliates of the A. F. G. E. in the American Federation of Labor will be apprised of the needs of Government employes. Abolition of the pay cut, restoration of sick and annual leave, classification, fair promotion system and all other matters indorsed by the convention will be stressed.

The campaign is designed to enlist the public on the side of the Federal employe so there will be a better understanding of the value to the Nation of its public servants.

Babcock En Route Here.

E. Claude Babcock, who succeeded John Arthur Shaw as president of the federation, is en route to Washington from the West. He is stopping at various cities to spur the initial part of the campaign in those areas.

Miss Esther Penn, of Seattle, Wash., new national secretary-treasurer, expressed confidence in the success of the campaign.

"Aided by the great power of organized labor," Miss Penn said yesterday, "we are confident we shall enlist the greater number of Government employes in our organization. Speaking personally, there is no doubt women are not getting the 'breaks' in Government service. During my own experience I have noted many instances where the vital principles of merit and equity, as applying to women, are being ignored. This is detrimental to the service.

Discrimination Assailed.

"Even in the great field of private industry, the Government has not exercised its prerogatives under the broad powers granted by the NRA to demand equal pay and equal opportunities for women—as witnessed by the various codes which permit employers to employ women at less money than men for the same work.

"This phase," Miss Penn continued, "is receiving the careful attention of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor under direction of Miss Mary Anderson.

"The A. F. G. E. is pledged to a policy of 'No Sex Discrimination' and I am convinced we shall be able to remove many of the inequities. In the meantime, the women should organize and press forward unitedly."

The chess organization will meet again tomorrow night, and Thursday the Checker Club will meet.

A general meeting of the Federal Bridge Club (separated from the Bridge League) has been called by M. J. Traviand, president, for Friday night. Mr. Traviand will introduce more than 40 new members for rubber play. Plans for a tournament will be discussed.

Employes in Check Section, General Accounting Office, yesterday were mystified by a bullet hole through a window pane. The hole, not an inch in diameter, is the topic of much speculation and some uneasiness around the office.

Hopkinson, Tariff Commission, and Robert S. Hollingshead, Foodstuffs Division, Commerce. Both are experienced in fisheries and fishery industries.

The fisheries section will have jurisdiction over codes affecting the fisheries, with exception of hours of labor and pay rates, which come under the NRA.

College Seeks Filling Station

Takoma Park Council Told Permit Will Give Ten Students Work.

Claiming it would open positions for 10 students, officials of Washington Missionary College last night asked Takoma Park Town Council to reconsider and permit erection of a gasoline station at Carroll and Flower avenues.

The council refused permission four months ago.

The annual audit of the accounts of J. Wilson Dodd, town clerk and treasurer, found them in perfect shape, it was reported to the council meeting last night in the Takoma firehouse.

A letter from Maj. E. Brooke Lee, of the State Roads Commission, stated work on the extension of the East-West highway through Takoma Park and Takoma Park avenue from the Chestnut street underpass to the Bliss Electrical School will be started as soon as Federal funds are available.

The council awarded contract for construction of curb and gutter on Lincoln, Albany and Buffalo avenues to H. H. Hershberger, of Baltimore, at a cost of $2,268. It ordered arrest of merchants near Laurel and Carroll avenues who permit garbage to accumulate.

A resolution was adopted, asking District Commissioners to build curbs and gutters on Eastern avenue, from Chestnut street to Cedar street.

Noted Scholar Today Becomes Seattle Bishop

Apostolic Delegate Will Elevate Most Rev. Shaughnessy.

The Most Rev. Gerald Shaughnessy, Marist, noted scholar and teacher, today will be consecrated Fourth Roman Catholic Bishop of Seattle, first member of the hierarchy consecrated in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Nearly 200 ranking church dignitaries will witness the ceremonies when his excellency, the Most Rev. Amelio Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate, elevates the 66-year-old priest to the episcopal rank. The ceremonies will begin at 10 a. m.

Bishop Shaughnessy will be the first priest consecrated a bishop in this country by the recently arrived apostolic delegate.

Century of History Recalled.

It was just a century ago that early fur traders on the northwest Pacific Coast petitioned for a priest. Although the fourth bishop to be assigned to this same area, Bishop Shaughnessy will be the first to be consecrated "Bishop of Seattle," his predecessor having been transferred to that diocese from the Nisqually see.

Close to a score of the highest dignitaries of the church in this country will occupy the crypt during the ceremonies. Aiding the apostolic delegate, as coconsecrators, will be the Most. Rev. Michael J. Keynes, Bishop of Savannah, and the Most. Rev. Charles D. White, Bishop of Spokane. The sermon will be preached by the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, Titular Bishop-elect of Modra, rector of Catholic University.

Ceremonies Described.

In keeping with the ancient continuity of ceremonies, the mass to be begun by the bishop-elect will be at the small wooden altar, once the property of Bishop John Carroll, first bishop of the Catholic Hierarchy in the United States. At the same time, the Apostolic Delegate will begin celebration of mass at the principal shrine altar. Symbolic of the elevation of the priest, when he is about to be made a bishop, he will move to the higher altar, indicating his rise.

The ceremonies will be followed by a luncheon at the university, at which speakers will include the Apostolic Delegate; Senator Walsh, Massachusetts; the Right Rev. William J. Noonan, administrator of the Seattle diocese, and the Very Rev. William J. Lonergan.

The bishop will be installed at St. James Cathedral, Seattle, October 4.

Bandits Routed From Fords' Inn

Clerk Ignores Gunman and Calls Police.

Detroit, Sept. 18 (AP).—Three bandits, one armed with a sawed-off shotgun, failed at 4 a. m. today in an attempt to hold up the night force of the Dearbon Inn, Henry Ford's early American hotel in Dearborn, when a clerk broke away although a gun was trained on him, and ran for help.

The bandits started after the clerk, but fled when they heard him calling police by telephone.

who used to be a circus hand, is philosophical about the injury which has kept him a year and a half in Emergency Hospitals. Grubbs was run over by a heavy wagon but has remained cheerful about his fate.

Circus Worker Rues Day He Crawled Under Heavy Wagon.

Plate Holds Thigh Bone Together, But He May Remain Crippled.

If it hadn't rained that Sunday morning, Henry Grubbs would not have crawled under the wagon. And if he had not crawled under the wagon, Emergency Hospital would have been deprived of a soft Alabama accent—Henry's accent—which has had 16 months to make itself familiar.

Grubbs—broken leg and all—was brought in early the morning of May 8, 1932, and has been in the hospital ever since. Up to then he was an employe of Johnny Jones shows. Worked on the "waltzer," an amusement concession.

A rain came up that morning when the show was pitched at Hoover Field and he crawled under the heavy circus wagon to keep dry. The pitter-patter was soothing. He fell asleep.

Tractor Drag Wagon Over Him.

Next, excruciating pain. A tractor, in moving the wagon off, had pulled it directly over the sleeping man's body. Grubbs probably owes his life to the fact he was lying on his side and not on his back.

He was a patient at Emergency before daylight. His right thigh bone was fractured and it has refused to heal. Philosophically he has undergone four operations. Right now the injured leg is held together by a 7-inch silver plate, fastened to the bone by six screws. As if to complicate matters further, X-ray pictures taken recently revealed two of the screws were working loose.

Realizing he may be a cripple for life, the 41-year-old patient refuses to become morbid. He only hopes that if amputation finally is necessary, he'll receive a sound artificial limb.

Hobbles About Now and Then.

Grubbs is a charity patient. Someone did pay his first week's bill, though, and he thinks it was the Johnny Jones outfit.

How does he pass away the time? Reading, swapping life histories with other patients in the large ward—and just sitting. The first ten months he had to lie in bed and that almost drove him crazy. Now he rolls about the ward and second-floor corridor in a wheel chair. Now and then he hobbles a bit with crutches.

Every week he receives a letter from his brother and 86-year-old mother, who live in a small town near Birmingham. Without friends or relatives here, he hasn't had a visitor, with the exception of former ward buddies, who drop in occasionally to ask "how's the leg coming along?"

Grubbs has had two birthdays in the hospital. The next one will fall on July 18, 1934. But he hopes to be out and working by that time. For a circus, maybe.

Bloody Clothing Causes Inquiry

Engineer Finds Apparel Near Ballston.

Mystery surrounds the finding of a bloody shirt and trousers in Gaines Addition, near Ballston, Arlington County, yesterday. It was found by R. P. Rupert, of Lyon Park, an engineer making a survey.

Rupert stated military authorities said the clothes were not those of a soldier. County police stated the garments had been there, apparently, a long time.

The clothing bore marks K-4443, 29½-S and 18-S. On the trousers the name Kent appeared. The name Wing-Long and Singapore was on the shirt. Military authorities stated that the marks did not correspond with their laundry marks. A Washington laundry box was near the clothing.

Ford Gets City Order Though Outside NRA

Detroit, Sept. 18 (AP).—Ignoring a resolution adopted a month ago in which it declared the city would buy only from concerns which had subscribed to the NRA program, the city council today voted to purchase 46 new Ford automobiles for city use.

The council made no comment on the fact that the Ford Motor Co. has not yet signed the NRA automotive code, nor obtained the Blue Eagle.

Some of Clerks Shown Reduced Unequally by Ruling.

Some of the clerks who get out the Emergency Relief Administration's pay roll of "work relief" receive less on an hourly basis than the men on the roll, according to analysis of the recent increases and decrease in salaries of District relief workers.

The greatest increase went to Leroy A. Halbert, director of local relief, whose salary was raised from $4,400 to $5,000.

Actual Cut of $5,500.

His increase and the increases to men and women on his staff totaled $14,000. But when the staff of the District committee on unemployment was added to his force there was a slash of $5,500.

Thirteen of the employment committee clerks who work on the pay roll of "made work" were among those who were cut. They now get $18.81 in cash per week. Their former salary was $25 per week.

Get Messenger Pay.

The increases in the salaries of Halbert's own staff still only brought the wages of some workers to approximately the same rate as is paid to messengers in other departments of the District government.

Pay increases were made after Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins claimed District relief workers were too poorly paid.

1-Room Cabin Nests Maitland Divorcee

Taxi Driver Bridegroom Once Banker, She Says.

Las Vegas, Nev., Sept. 18 (AP).—In a one-room cabin, fitted with two chairs, a makeshift dresser and other odds and ends of furniture, Mrs. Ruth T. Maitland Dickson Howard, once socially prominent in Washington, settled down today with her third husband, Dewey Howard, 31-year-old taxi driver.

"He hasn't always driven a taxi," said Mrs. Howard, former wife of Lester J. Maitland, noted Army aviator, and of Cecil Dickson, Washington writer.

"Dewey started out as a banker. Banks went broke. Then he wasn't afraid to work for a living."

NRA Success Sure, Laird Tells Women

Public Enthusiasm Means Victory, He Says.

The growing success of the NRA was emphasized by Col George R. Laird, of Executive Headquarters, in an address last night to the Women's Democratic Education Council at the Mayflower Hotel.

"Ultimate success of the NRA campaign is inevitable because of public enthusiasm and support of our great President," Col. Laird said. "Conciliation and consideration are the bywords."

Miss Stella Akin, special assistant to the Attorney General, discussed legal aspects of the NRA.

Mrs. Grattan Kerans is president of the club.

Heating Plan Work Is Halted By New Strike

Boilermakers Walk Out Over Right to Erect Smokestacks.

With work on the new I. C. C. Labor Department Building at standstill, a second tie-up threatened the Federal construction program yesterday when negotiations failed to mend the split between boilermakers and iron workers at the central heating plant, Twelfth and C streets southwest.

Boilermakers claim they should be allowed to erect smokestacks at the plant and have walked out in protest because the work was given to the iron trade. The strikers refused yesterday to divide the job on a 50-50 basis. They said iron workers already have completed 85 per cent of the disputed job.

Government and contracting company officials expressed fear that the conflict may prevent occupancy of some of the large buildings scheduled to be completed soon.

Smokestacks are being erected by iron workers, but installation of boilers is at a standstill.

The walkout of carpenters because iron workers installed radiator inclosures at the new I.C.C. Labor Department Building continues.

Settlement of a wage dispute between the Catalano Construction Co. and bricklayers was brought closer yesterday when the building firm offered to submit the problem to an arbitration board. Twenty bricklayers have demanded compensation for back work done at a lower wage than required by the Bacon-Davis law. Pending agreement, the District is withholding $6,000 in payments to the Catalano Co.

His trial is set for the November term of Federal Court.

Printing Units Fail to Agree Upon 21 Codes

Labor Spokesmen Oppose Proposed Schedules for 40-Hour Week.

(Associated Press.)

Opposes 40-Hour Week.

Several employes indorsed provisions for 40-hour weeks in all these with minimum wages of 40 cents an hour. But labor spokesmen, among them George T. Lord, representing the New York Employing Printers Association, Inc., disagreed.

Lord held a 40-hour week "would not increase jobs sufficiently" and that a 40-cent an hour wage would not boost purchasing power. He recommended at 32-hour week of four 8-hour days and asked wage minimums for skilled as well as unskilled workers.

The Periodical Publishers Institute, the Book Manufacturers Institute, the Lithographers National Association, the National Gravure Printers Association indorsed the National Editorial Association Code, some with reservations.

The International Trade Composition Association (typesetters) demanded 36 hours and a 90-cent minimum for skilled workers; the International Association of Electrotypers asked to be left out entirely; the Label Manufacturers Association suggested modifications.

"Master" Charter Drafted.

In presenting what he called the basic code, W. D. Allen, president of the N. E. A., told how it had been drawn in recent days in answer to NRA pleas for a "master" charter. He declined to agree under questioning that it embodied price fixing.

Of the 14,174 newspapers in the United States, more than 90 per cent are outside metropolitan centers, H. E. Baldridge, vice president of N. E. A., estimated. He said a 40-hour work week would raise employment to the July, 1929, level.

Baldridge also explained reporters and editorial workers making more than $25 a week should not be placed on restricted hours because of the kind of work they do and asked that children under 16 be allowed to deliver newspapers so long as that work did not interfere with school hours or harm health.

Civil War Vets Talk Politics At Convention

Nurse, Sheridan Trooper Met for First Time Since '61 Days.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 18 (AP).—Between song hits of Civil War days, veterans of '61 here for the sixty-seventh annual reunion and encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic today discussed Presidential politics.

Despite declining years and their fast-thinning ranks, not a man of them failed to declare he would vote in 1936.

President Roosevelt, the NRA and prospective Republican nominees were freely discussed as the soldiers of yesteryear played and sang "Yankee Doodle," "Turkey in the Straw" and "Marching Through Georgia."

About their own election, talk tended toward Russel C. Martin, of Los Angeles, commander in chief, who succeeded to that office upon the death of William P. Wright, of Chicago, this year.

Most of the Civil War veterans seemingly favored Rochester, N. Y., for their next year's convention city, though determined bids were being pressed by Grand Rapids, Mich., and Des Moines, Iowa.

The executive committee of the National Council of Administration elected Arthur Dawson, Chicago, junior vice commander. He will serve three days unless reelected during the convention.

The parade will be held tomorrow.

A small white-haired woman, Mrs. Alice Carey Risley, who has seven great-grandchildren, met George A. Gay, Nashua, N. H., for the first time since Sheridan's ride.

She was a nurse, then. She is 86 now. He was a soldier of the Yankee Army. He is 84 now. They were with the Union forces with Gen. "Spoon" Butler down South back in '61 and today, amid the blaring of a fife and drum corps playing "Turkey in the Straw," they reminiscended.

Mrs. Risley hasn't missed a G. A. R. convention in the last twenty years. Her first one was in Milwaukee in 1889. Gay has seen 49 conventions and expects to attend two or three more.

Publisher Scores Europe's Censors

Press Safeguards U. S., McCormick Says.

Boston, Sept. 18 (AP).—The newspaper in the United States, Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, said today, is the bulwark under the Constitution "against the conspiracy of foreign agents to reintroduce among us the tyranny from which our earliest forebears escaped and later ones revolted."

He spoke at the fifth annual Boston conference on retail distribution.

"The newspapers are a powerful force," said Col. McCormick, "with which to combat the reaction in Europe which led to the unbalancing of our economic balance here. Realizing this, Mussolini, Hitler and especially Stalin have clamped down a severe censorship, but so elastic and virile a thing is a newspaper that censorship never succeeds. It merely whets the public appetite for such information as the learned editor steers past the vengeful and inevitably stupid censor."

H. Gordon Selfridge, English Stores president, speaking from London, commended the NRA program and paid tribute to President Roosevelt's leadership.

'Apple Annie' Gets Her Break; She'll Be Real Lady for Day

Street Vendor 16 Years to Know Affluence in Publicity Stunt.

"Apple Annie," really Mrs. Elizabeth Hart, 1112 New York avenue northwest, is 64 years old. In the 16 years she has sold apples and newspapers at Fourteenth and G streets northwest, she has become a familiar sight to hundreds.

It hasn't been an easy life she led. The rhyme about "The Colonel's Lady and Judie O'Grady" may be true, but "Apple Annie's" lot hasn't been altogether that of a fine and haughty lady. No furs, no cars, no jewelry, no servants were "Annie's."

Last night came a transformation for Annie. It was only part of a publicity stunt for a movie called "Lady for a Day," but that wasn't important to Annie. The thing that counted was that probably for the first time in her hard-worked life, Annie started to get everything to make her literally a "lady for a day."

The miracle started when a sleek limousine stopped beside her stand and picked her up. She was whisked to a downtown hotel, and went to sleep in a downy bed with silken covers in the room occupied by President and Mrs. Coolidge when he was Vice President.

Today the miracle continues. Annie is to have her long limousine, clothes, jewelry and flowers. She is to have her breakfast in bed, maids to attend her and a visit to a beauty shop.

Fixed up, Annie is to shop in the finest stores and to be feted at a luncheon, the ball game and a dinner in a fashionable hotel restaurant. She will visit a broadcasting station, the theater to show the film, and a night club that will end her day. But ladyship will continue, for Annie will keep the clothes and gifts she gets, and a $50 check beside.

President Unable to Go To Legion's Convention

Sugar Quotas Changed Again

Third Agreement Drawn and Almost Ready for President.

(Associated Press.)

The third and latest version of the proposed sugar stabilization agreement last night was almost ready to be laid before President Roosevelt and farm act officials.

It calls for larger quotas for Cuba and the Philippines with the quotas for other producing interests remaining practically unchanged.

The allotment for Cuba for the domestic market probably will be around 2,000,000 raw tons for this marketing year.

The Philippines sought 1,200,000 tons. Present plans are to raise the figure more than 100,000 tons over the 955,920 originally assigned.

If approved the pact would be in effect three years, dating back to July 1.

In order to take care of increased Cuban and Philippine allotments, plans were made to set up a sugar reserve corporation. It would operate probably through Reconstruction Corporation funds. Farm Administration officials felt domestic interests might fail to produce the quotas assigned them. In that case, it would be easy to dispose of stored up sugar without upsetting prices.

Maximum quotas for Cuba and the Philippines are to apply for only one year and to be scaled down annually. If the reserve corporation should be unable to dispose of the sugar held during this season, allotments for next year would be reduced accordingly.

President Roosevelt took a hand in the sugar situation, after it appeared differences were irreconcilable. He designated Dr. John Lee Coulter, of the Tariff Commission, to approach various groups with new proposals.

Progress has been rapid for the past few days. It was said tonight, however, there was still the possibility unforeseen dissension would wreck the agreement before it was sent to the President.

It is believed Nelson went to sleep at the wheel. His body will be sent today to Cumberland, Md., home of his parents.

Wallace Acts To Fix Prices For Tobacco

His Aids Write Code to Be Submitted to Industry.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Wallace would assume power to dictate prices of flue-cured tobacco under a proposed trade agreement drafted by his subordinates yesterday to be submitted to representatives of the industry for approval Thursday.

It would extend to him the broadest authority so far suggested for the control of prices of any commodity by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and is regarded as the forerunner of a new policy covering agreements for other tobacco types whose growers are complaining of low prices.

Instead of waiting for the industry to submit a plan, Wallace's aids are taking the initiative. Buyer companies would be licensed. Authority to examine accounts of the buying companies, their affiliates and subsidiaries, would be given Wallace.

It is an effort to provide quick relief from low prices which recently caused governors of the four States to call a market holiday.

The Federal Advisory Council.

Advisory boards and councils organized to assist the development and effective execution of governmental policies have been multiplying rapidly of late. Their mushroom growth is explained by the fact that the Federal Government has suddenly expanded its regulatory powers to embrace a wide range of activities formerly left to private direction and control. The existing governmental organization could not in the nature of the case meet the demands of the changed order except by calling for the advice and active cooperation of outsiders prepared to place their special knowledge at the disposal of the authorities.

However, advisory boards which are the product of an emergency usually cease to function when the generating crisis is past, unlike boards established by law to act in an advisory capacity in normal times as well as in periods of stress and strain. An interesting and outstanding example of the latter type of organization is found in the Federal Advisory Council which is now holding its regular fall meeting in Washington. The council is a statutory body established under section 12 of the Federal Reserve Act. It consists of twelve members elected annually by the boards of directors of the several Reserve Banks, from their respective districts. Meetings of members must be held at least four times yearly at Washington and may be called oftener by the Reserve Board, while the council itself may hold other meetings if it so desires.

Not only is the organization of the Federal Advisory Council along the lines indicated made mandatory by law, but various subjects upon which advice may be tendered are set forth in the Reserve Act. The council has power by itself or through its officers "to confer directly with the Federal Reserve Board on business conditions." It may also "make oral or written representations concerning matters within the jurisdiction of said board" and it may call for information and "make recommendations in regard to discount rates, rediscount business, note issues, reserve conditions in the various districts, the purchase and sale of gold or securities by reserve banks, open market operations by said banks, and the general affairs of the reserve banking system."

Thus it will be seen that the members of the council are privileged to make recommendations concerning some of the most immediate and vital issues that are before the country today. Certainly there never has been a time when there was greater need for trained and intelligent expressions of opinion on monetary and credit control problems. Especially important is the question of the extent to which private institutions properly and safely can be made instrumentalities for giving effect to experimental governmental policies designed to raise prices. Such subjects as these call for frank and free discussion by members of the council familiar with conditions throughout the country. The financial needs of the Government also require attention since they too make heavy demands upon the banks, quite apart from the assistance which the banks are called upon to give to private industry.

The extreme complexity of the credit and currency problems encountered in a country with the diversified industrial resources of the United States makes an interchange of views between the representatives of the member banks and officers of the Reserve System highly desirable and necessary at all times. In the present emergency, the Federal Advisory Council has a rare opportunity to perform a real service to the country. It can best perform that service by offering constructive suggestions to the Reserve authorities regarding monetary and credit problems and by helping to clarify confused thought on these vitally important subjects.

For Safer Highways.

The greatest assemblage of representatives of organizations interested in minimizing traffic hazards will gather in Chicago during the first week of October under the auspices of the National Safety Council. More than 5,000 delegates will attend the congress and exposition, which will be devoted to furthering efforts to make the country safer for both motorists and pedestrians.

The most comprehensive movement ever undertaken for the study of causes and remedies in connection with highway hazards will be initiated at Chicago. Standing committees will present reports covering such designated surveys as accident records, traffic enforcement, pedestrian problems, police activities, traffic engineering and traffic law unity.

The question of greater uniformity in motor laws is considered one of growing importance to both passenger car users and those who employ the highway in the course of business. Uniformity of regulations in matters of signs, signals and control would help to eliminate many accidents.

Redoubled efforts on the part of all safety organizations and traffic officials as well as motorists themselves are found necessary when the most recent figures on highway accidents are considered. During the early part of this year motor vehicle fatalities were 10 per cent less than they were a year ago. In July they were more than 10 per cent greater than they were in July, 1932.

Union Square.

Development of Union Square, adjoining the Capitol Grounds on the west, and completion of roads through the Mall are provided for in an allotment of $600,000 from the Public Works Administration.

Union Square will occupy the area lately occupied by the Botanic Garden, which has been removed to a site to the southward. The square will be bounded by First and Third streets and Maryland and Pennsylvania avenues. It will become a suitable setting for the magnificent Grant Memorial and the Meade statue, and will constitute the eastern end of the Mall proper.

In this area are many historic trees, which doubtless will be retained if well placed, or replanted elsewhere, perhaps in the new Botanic Garden Grounds.

The development of the Mall includes construction of four highways for its entire length, the two outer roadways to be lined with elm trees. The inner roads will be sufficiently separated to afford a clear vista between the Capitol and the Monument.

For the time being a few temporary buildings in the Mall will be left undisturbed, but eventually they will be removed. The chief buildings to remain in the Mall Grounds will be the National Museum and the Smithsonian Institution Building. Already several departmental structures line Constitution avenue north of the Mall, and doubtless other buildings will be erected ultimately along the south line.

With the extensive improvements between the Capitol and Union Station, installation of a new and larger Botanic Garden south of the Capitol, and the construction of Union Square, the Capitol will be the center of one of the most imposing park landscapes in the world. To the east of the Capitol is rising the Supreme Court Building, balancing the Library of Congress, and completing the plans for treatment of the Capitol Plaza and its immediate environment.

School Problems.

The plight of public schools in many sections due to a shortage of maintenance funds, formed the most vital topic of discussion by the National Council of State Superintendents and Commissioners of Education at its meeting in Washington. Various advocates of Federal aid for schools urged such action because of the extraordinary conditions existing. Dr. George F. Zook, Commissioner of Education, indicated that one source of help was immediately available, that of funds from the Public Works Administration for building purposes, which would release local appropriations for other uses.

Education officials find the necessities of some sections so urgent, however, that they consider direct assistance for teachers' salaries and current school expenses imperative if educational facilities are not to suffer serious impairment. The president of the council, Charles E. Lee, reported on conditions in various States. His survey indicates that closed schools and shortened periods of instruction already affect 2,000,000 children and that the unpaid salaries of teachers aggregates more than $40,000,000, with many instructors receiving less than a living wage.

Due to depression conditions Dr. Lee finds that many boards of education are unable to provide necessary books and supplies and that health and physical education has often been eliminated. The situation in New England and other north Atlantic States and on the Pacific Coast is reported better than in the mid-west and in the southern States.

No Federal agency is authorized to make direct appropriation to aid school maintenance. There is strong feeling in many quarters that it is essentially the duty of the States to provide for their own schools.

Quack Remedies.

One important task which will be urged upon the Congress at its 1934 session is revision of the pure food and drugs act, which was passed in 1906. The Congress will be asked to bring the act up to date and to extend the protection which it offers the public against impure foods and worthless medicines.

One condition which led to the enactment of the food and drugs law was the extensive sale of worthless remedies under false pretenses. Fabulous claims as to the health-giving qualities of harmful drugs and worthless concoctions were printed on the labels of these products to deceive the public. The present law forbids the use of false and misleading statements on labels, but this does not prevent the dispensers of such products from making their claims through other media. Under the new food and drugs bill the dissemination of any false claims for foods, drugs or cosmetics would be prohibited.

An article in Editor and Publisher by R. G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, points out that there is no intention of setting up a censorship over the advertising of foods and drugs. The real purpose of the bill is to make manufacturers of such products liable for any fraudulent claims that may be made as to their therapeutic values. If responsibility for fraudulent claims can be placed where it belongs, the public probably will be saved a tidy sum of money, and injury and death in many cases may be prevented.

Quack remedies that are offered to the public as cures for numerous diseases are often harmless in themselves, but when sick people are led to use them with the expectation that they will be cured, proper treatment is often neglected and death may be the result.

Mr. Tugwell calls attention to one so-called remedy for diabetes that is made in an unscientific way from a weed called horse-tail. A recent exhibit of this fluid was surrounded by testimonials of persons who claimed to be cured by it, but some one had also gathered the death certificates of the individuals writing the testimonials, and in each case doctors had certified that diabetes was the cause of death. The death certificates equaled the testimonials. "This is particularly tragic," says Mr. Tugwell, "now that science has given us insulin, which will retard the effects of the disease and permit diabetics to live a normal span of life."

In view of the large sums that are spent annually in the United States on quack remedies, revision of the food and drugs act to provide adequate protection against them becomes a significant undertaking.

The Rio Grande Treaty.

Ratification by the Mexican senate of the treaty finally concluded early this year for the straightening of the course of the Rio Grande in the El Paso, Tex., district, will permit this urgent work to be undertaken without much further delay. The project is important for flood control purposes and for the settlement of constantly recurring boundary disputes.

The treaty covering this subject was signed by the Mexican Minister of Foreign Relations, Jose Manuel Puig Casaurane and American Ambassador J. Reuben Clark, last February and was ratified by the United States Senate. Under its terms some 155 miles of tortuous channel will be cut to 87 miles, thereby accelerating the current, and with the addition of storage reservoirs and levees is expected to remove many of the difficulties, both local and international, which arose from variations in the river's course.

The projected alterations contemplate an expenditure of over $5,000,000 during a period of nearly four years, the major portion to be provided by the United States. The work is expected to give employment to upwards of 2,000 men. Expenditures will also include the purchase of necessary properties for rights of way, channel rights, and changes in irrigation plants. Nearly 4,000 acres will be transferred back and forth from one international control to the other.

While this river treaty does not undertake to settle the old Chamizal controversy relating to a considerable section of El Paso, the rectification of the long stretch from Cordoba Island, above El Paso, to Box Canyon below Fort Quitman, will establish water boundaries that will do away with the constant changes and transfers of land areas from one national jurisdiction to another. With a government-owned and controlled channel the cause of innumerable private and international differences will be eliminated.

A movement is on to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the Constitution four years hence; but delays are dangerous.

It remains for some great scientist to discover whether cosmic rays are the cause or the result of hard times.

The new war debt discussions will at least provide exercise for rusty diplomatic tongues.

The seasons for hurricanes and revolutions in Cuba are not necessarily coterminous.

New Kind of Trains.

By Henry F. Pringle, in the Cosmopolitan.

Trains of the new era will cross the continent in 50 hours. They are being designed by aviation engineers to compete with the air lines. They will be operated at about half the cost of today's crack trains. Excursions from New York to Los Angeles will be available at a base fare of $30 or $35. The railroads will pay dividends once more.

Tomorrow's train, soundly conservative estimates show, can carry a passenger for about 1 cent a mile under capacity traffic. The railroads are far from extinct; indeed, a new day dawns. It comes with the elimination of excess weight.

The trains planned for the Burlington and the Union Pacific are very similar. Their top speed will be 110 miles per hour. They can easily average 85 miles. Each will be limited to 80 tons. Contrast this with a minimum of 1,000 tons for the average old-style train and you have some comprehension of the economies which will result.

The two trains, one of aluminum and the other of stainless steel, will be beautiful sights as they flash past the countryside. The margin of profit in the operation of such trains will be large. It is for this reason that railroad officials look forward to the day when tomorrow's train crosses the continent in 40 or 50 hours. The Burlington train will cost only 55 cents a mile to run. This is an almost unbelievable figure; so extraordinary that the data behind it have been checked and rechecked. See what it means, the Government allows 28 cents a mile for carrying the mails. The Burlington will therefore be required to spend only 27 cents a mile for this new and speedy train.

Today's basic passenger rate is 3.6 cents per mile. Suppose, for the sake of simple calculations, that it were 3 cents. This means that only nine passengers would have to be carried for the train to break even! The rate could be slashed to 2 cents and operating costs met, with only thirteen passengers. The capacity of the train is 76 passengers.

A ten-car conventional train needs 3,400 horsepower. The Union Pacific's train will be equipped with Winton distillate engines instead of Diesels, and the fuel to be burned will cost only 4 cents per gallon. One gallon will pull the train 1¼ miles!

The railroads are profiting from the data and knowledge accumulated by the aircraft industry. Aviation engineers, not old-line railroad men, have designed the new trains which will soon speed across the continent.

Traffic Troubles in Baltimore Bother Motorists Going Through—Courteous Appeal for Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The motorists of Washington who have occasion to go through Baltimore have great difficulties. A friend of mine has described this situation in a courteous letter to a Baltimore paper, asking for relief, and I echo his sentiments. In his letter he says:

"I have just returned from a motor journey which took me into eighteen States, and in none of them did I have as much difficulty in driving through traffic as in Baltimore. Your fair city may be a street-car rider's paradise, but it is a motorist's purgatory.

"I believe I have tried every possible route through Baltimore (there seems to be no way around it) and all of them are very trying and consume much time that might be more pleasantly spent. United States Route 1, via Monroe street and North avenue, is perhaps the lesser of the various evils, but it is choked with traffic lights and crowded with street-car safety islands throughout a great part of its length. With my Washington license plate I can sometimes slip into the inside of a safety island, but invariably I am stopped by a red light. And invariably a street car slips up behind, ding-dinging its bell and cursing me. I curse back, and there are hard feelings all around. It doesn't seem right and it certainly doesn't add to the gayety of nations. The net result is that I am soon angry enough to beat traffic lights, cut in on other drivers (whenever they are not doing the same to me) and calling Baltimore every kind of a naughty, naughty name that I can recall.

"Can't your motor club or perhaps one of the writers of your staff or some one suggest a pleasant and leisurely route through or around your city? I am seldom in any great haste, but I like to roll along.

"I'm a Baltimore well-wisher, and I don't like to feel toward it as I am sure every motorist must feel. Can't you suggest something to assuage our injured feelings?"

Instead of Fingerprints, Reader Suggests That Criminals Be Tattooed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read a short time ago that there were 3,800,000 fingerprints of criminals, and some people are trying to have every person in the entire United States fingerprinted, a most absurd idea.

I propose that all persons be tattooed indelibly on the back of both hands for the first offense that would call for an imprisonment of more than 30 days. This would be a means of notifying every one when he sees the imprint that he is dealing with a person of a past record and would caution him to beware.

For the second offense, I suggest a second tattoo, and after that criminals should be placed before a firing squad and finished. It is an outrage on decent people to be their victims and then be obliged to support them. Of the very many in prisons, a reformed criminal is a rarity.

Dry Voter Says When Eighth Commandment Can Be Enforced Liquor Can Be Controlled.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "indifference" of dry voters (and I am one of them) lies in the lack of faith in a leadership that has left us no proper choice to make in voting. Why vote for a scheme of "concurrent power" that doesn't work? Why vote for nullification?

When a system of national laws and police power has been evolved so the eighth commandment can be enforced (it's a 50-century failure now) there will be a machinery that can handle liquor laws also.

ALDEN O. POTTER.

The Bull Dog Doesn't Prove His Courage by Snarling at a Rabbit

By Robert Quillen

There are exceptions to this rule, of course, as there are three-legged chickens, but it may be accepted as a general proposition that the man who begins hostilities shows no evidence of courage.

This rule is contrary to popular belief. It is generally supposed that the fighter is a man of valor who does battle for his rights or principles without regard for his personal safety.

But this is rarely true of the aggressor.

Observe the man who threatens to knock somebody's block off. Almost invariably he is larger, stronger, younger or more skilled than the one he threatens.

He knows, or at least has reason to believe, that he can make good his threat without risk of being hurt. He doesn't expect to fight, but merely to "sock" somebody who won't have a chance.

Since he knows he can assault his victim without danger to himself, he manifests no more courage than the hunter who shoots a deer or the parents who beats a child.

In fairy stories, a game little man jumps on big ones, but it doesn't happen in real life. The urge to punch somebody on the jaw is easy to control unless the somebody is a little fellow.

No bad fighting man with a fierce temper has yet slapped Dempsey. And never yet has a beefy bully made good his threat while facing the business end of a gun.

Little or big, the man who makes the attack has an advantage that makes him safe. He has superior strength or he has a weapon.

And his desire to inflict hurt without risk to himself is not an indication of courage, but of cruelty. As a boy he probably enjoyed pulling off the wings of flies.

The gangster and his kind, commonly portrayed as bold and fearless "tough guys," have never yet given evidence of courage.

They might be brave, if put to the test, but their tactics require no bravery. They always have the "drop." They have their guns in hand, ready to shoot at the first hint of danger. Or they fight back, when cornered, as the most timid creatures will.

If you would see bravery, observe the African who attacks a lion with no other weapon than a spear—or the American who openly testifies before a grand jury despite the threats of a gang leader.

Comment of the Press

Cincinnati Enquirer.

In the discussion of how to tighten the police powers of the country to break up gangs of racketeers who are now centering on kidnaping, Arthur B. Freund, of St. Louis, has taken a conspicuous place. In his field he is known as the principal framer of the Federal kidnaping statute, which he based on the theory that if the Government could intervene in police powers by declaring the interstate transportation of an automobile a felony under its jurisdiction, it could take up the matter of the transportation of a stolen human being.

He emphasizes that criminal gangs operate from bases in metropolitan centers, where they have dug themselves in under cover of local political conditions, and hence it is necessary to attack the whole crime problem at the source rather than to try to wish it entirely on the national Government.

With the local and state network tied in through his plan, he believes the augmentation of the Federal forces of detection, particularly through the Identification Bureau, will make the whole Nation a vastly safer place.

Correction From Hollywood.
Kansas City Times.

The statement credited to Miss Claire Windsor, the motion picture actress, that rather than go to work, to pay a damage award of $75,000 in connection with a suit for alienation of affections, "I will get married again," raises an interesting question. Is it possible that the rest of the country has been mistaken all this time about Hollywood's attitude toward marriage? There has certainly been a general impression, created through the years, that the motion picture colony, as a whole, does not take that institution very seriously, but here is important evidence to the contrary.

The implication of Miss Windsor's statement is that only her outraged sense of justice would lead her to take such drastic action as to get married again.

Housing as "Public Works."
Los Angeles Times.

Allotment of $13,545,000 of the Federal public works fund under his control to housing projects in Ohio, Missouri and the Virgin Islands by Secretary Ickes, coupled with the announcement that a new housing agency is being planned to start housing projects in various cities, is designed to be a boost to the building industry. Such might be the result if the intention is not to start a new government corporation to compete with private industry, but to aid the private industries already engaged in this line. Details as to how the work is to be carried out must be awaited.

When government enters a field private capital is inclined to retire from it, and in the aggregate far more building is done for private account than the most elaborate government program could possibly bring about.

Russia's Air Fears.
New York Times.

Why Soviet Russia, above all others, should be concerned over the threat of aerial invasion is hard to see. When the experts discuss the "coming" war in the air, they see it as a series of raids directed against the enemy's industrial centers. In the last resort, there will be attacks on the principal cities for the purpose of breaking the morale of the civilian population. It is the crowded centers that will be the most exposed to bombardment. The small town and the open country will suffer least; so much so that two schools of thought foresee the cities of the future either going underground or else melting away altogether.

NO LIFE ON MARS.

Mars is without life or canals, according to Sir James Jeans, the eminent British astronomer. In a lecture to the Royal Institution in London, he declared that he does not believe in the Martian man. "Life on Mars is not impossible," he said, "but personally, I do not think there is any." With regard to the canals, Sir James considers that they are hallucinations of certain astronomers who looked too long and too steadfastly at Mars until they began to imagine things. "The longer you look the more you see," he said. In support of these statements Sir James showed photographs of the planet Mars taken through modern high-powered telescopes, which showed no trace of the canals of which early astronomers have drawn detailed maps.

Golf's Best Day

Golf is a very trying game
Beyond the slightest doubt.
Few men its mastery can claim
Or pry its secrets out.
One day the drives are straight and true,
The next a slice appears.
Then almost ends in tears.
But to the best and worst of men,
Howe'er they stroke the ball,
Come glad occasions, now and then,
When long and short putts fall.

The harder man may try
The more the game will punish him
With shots that go awry.
Then suddenly will come a change,
Too subtle to define,
And in a happy way but strange
His ball will hold the line.
But of the thrills the game bestows
'Tis this that takes the crown,
The day that strangely comes and goes
When all the putts run down.

No man alive can quite explain
Golf's weird, mysterious way,
Sometimes the best of skill is vain
And good shots go astray.
Then follow moments when in spite
Of lunge and looking up
A golf ball, to the dub's delight,
Falls dead beside the cup.
But stranger still to all who play,
And never understood,
Is that unlooked-for glorious day

Rum Control Post Declined By Volstead

Would Give Dry Law Foes Free Hand, Then Hold Them Responsible.

St. Paul, Sept. 18 (AP).—Andrew J. Volstead, coauthor of the Federal dry enforcement act, declined today to serve on the State liquor control commission.

Volstead, practicing law at Granite Falls, said:

"It is a toss-up whether the so-called Canadian liquor control system is better than the saloon."

In a letter to Gov. Floyd B. Olson, Volstead said:

"Those who have opposed prohibition have posed as friends of temperance and law enforcement. They ought to have a free hand to deal with the matter and be responsible for results.

"Suggestion that the State may become the sole dispenser of liquor does not interest me."

A Penalty Pass That Backfired.

The vogue of passing good biddable hands as Dealer or Second Hand gained considerable popularity for a time, but now is unquestionably on the decline. Some players who still follow this policy explain: "I never open the bidding First or Second Hand unless I hold a good Rebid." The purpose of this policy is not exactly clear, unless it is to trap the unwary overcaller of the "sandbagger's" partner. This purpose may occasionally be realized if the opponents are not familiar with the system. Quite often, however, it is the trapper who is trapped.

An illuminating example of this occurred in a recent Rubber game at the Bridge Club of Toronto. Mr. John W. Jacobson sat South, his partner being Mr. Percy Sheardown, known to his Bridge friends as an optimist of the first water. A crucial situation had been reached in the rubber, with both sides having a game and North and South having a part-score of 60 as well as 1,000 or so in penalty points above the line, when this hand came along:

East, Dealer.
Part-score: North-South 60.

1—The Penalty Pass.
2—Mr. Jacobson had alternative bids—either one spade or one notrump. With the part-score, the partner must, of course, shade his requirements for responding.
3—Mr. Sheardown evidently feared that he had not yet shown the full strength of his "fine distributional hand" on the first round.
4—What unusual pessimism! Why North failed to bid six hearts to show no losers in that suit is extremely mystifying. Perhaps he felt that, after all, with ½ honor-trick in his hand, two bids were all that were required. But as a consequence of his departure from character, a Grand Slam, depending upon a double club finesse, was missed.
5—East felt that the moment had arrived for the axe. With two probable club tricks over the bidder, plus the Ace and King of hearts, a large penalty seems assured.

It is patent that had East opened the bidding with one heart, North would have played the hand in two or three diamonds. Actually, the policy which dictates passing on East's hand is similar to that which guides the ostrich when he hides his head in the sand, thinking he also makes invisible the bulk of his body. It is certain that North and South, if they have cards justifying opening the bidding, will bid whether East and West do or not, the part-score being sufficient incentive to possibly shade the requirements for both bids and raises, as, with a part score, it is often very simple to push vulnerable opponents to the point where a heavy penalty is certain. East's best course, which in this case would probably have prevented the bidding of a Slam, was to boldly open the bidding on his three-plus honor-tricks, in which case it is well nigh certain that North and South would not have progressed to a point higher than two or three diamonds or whatever number was necessary to make East and West cry "Enough."

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South is playing a contract of six hearts, against which West has opened the diamond Ace, how should South plan the play to fulfill his contract?

Farley Will Test the Fishing On Garner's Stomping Ground

He Is Going to Find Out About Nimrod Claims Around Uvalde.

(Associated Press.)

Postmaster General James A. Farley is going to see what it is that makes Vice President John N. Garner insist upon roaming his Texas "stomping grounds" instead of staying in Washington when Congress is not in session.

For years, Farley and Garner have been close friends. For years, Garner has been inviting Farley to come to Texas. Next month Farley is going.

The Postmaster General was invited to dedicate a new postoffice in Meridian, Miss., October 18. He accepted. Garner sent Farley another invitation. So Farley, with two Assistant Postmasters General, an executive assistant, and possibly the treasurer of the Democratic national committee and a secretary to President Roosevelt, will visit Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Houston, too. They will fly, but will stop long enough to make speeches and for Farley to meet Gov. Miriam A. (Ma) Ferguson and her husband, Jim. Farley, too, will open a race track between Fort Worth and Dallas.

The Postmaster General and his guests will go with Garner to Uvalde, the Vice President's home.

A few miles from Uvalde is a ranch owned by R. W. Morrison, wealthy Texan prominent in Democratic politics. On that ranch for Farley's benefit will be given a barbecue and a real Texas rodeo.

The trip will be made between October 18 and October 22 or 23. But maybe Farley will have a chance to jump into the old "fishing schooner" of which Garner is so proud—a rattletrap automobile.

What's in Fashion?

New Snug Fitted Sleeves Give Bracelets Big Role

Directed by Amos Parrish

Bracelets are certainly taking the center of the jewelry stage. With so many sleeves only three-quarter length and the long ones snug and plain at the wrist, there's every chance for bracelets to display their best form. And, incidentally, dress up the dress.

Especially right now when the new darker dress colors are beginning to be worn. They need a color accent.

No matter what style or material your new dress is, you can find a bracelet which complements it perfectly.

Easy Clip-On.

For a dressier looking bracelet a heavy one, much carved in the 1890 way, is a good idea, since 1890 things are in fashion.

Dressy Filigree.

For even more dressy use . . . very formal afternoon or evening . . . those old-fashioned filigree bracelets are back. The fourth sketch shows one of these with stones combined with the filigree.

Bracelets are even being worn over gloves are pulled up over dress sleeves. A cut-out metal one which allows the color of the glove or sleeve to show through would be a good choice. One something like the second sketch, for example.

Of course there are many, many more kinds of bracelets which you may find go better with your costume than these. Some are all-metal, some composition, some a combination of metal-and-composition or metal-and-wood. Some of all wood, some even of fabric—twisted cords or satin.

Ensemble Tieup.

Many of these can be found in an ensemble tie-up of bracelet-and-clip or pin, or bracelet-and-ring. Or you can make your own ensemble matching your hat feather or ornament with a colored bracelet.

Just what color bracelet goes with what costume—and some other smart ideas about other kinds of jewelry—are the subject for a new leaflet which you may have by sending the filled-in coupon with enclosures.

"Boy Friend" Would Thrill to This Gift

By Ruth Anne Davis.

The sweet young thing sat at her desk, her pencil poised in one hand, and her cheek resting against the other. Furrows of perplexity creased her brow.

She wrote on a piece of note paper, "ties, socks, brush set, fountain pen, scarf," and then viewed her list. Impatiently she tossed it aside.

Her mother entered the room and, seeing her daughter in such a quandary, ventured to ask the cause.

"Well, let me help you," her mother suggested.

The sweet young miss laughed. "Mother, you wouldn't know what a young man would like in this day and time!"

"No, possibly not," she said, "but I have an idea one of those new flasks I saw downtown might please Bob above and beyond all else."

Daughter sat up straight and registered the considerable surprise she felt at her mother's suggestion. Then she laughed. "Mother, dear! What is to become of this older generation?"

And Bob did like the flask. He liked the leather cover, which gave it a swagger air, and the chromium top, which had useful cuplike qualities. But he told the sweet young thing she'd better not tell her mother what she gave him.

"You know," he said, "that older generation—can't understand!"

A beautiful desk is too often made unattractive by a cheap desk set. Just for the fun of it, pretend you're Mrs. Somebody Else, who might drop in on an afternoon for a cup of tea and a bit of gossip. Sit there in the chair just as she would and regard your desk quite impersonally. See if there are points about it that she would seize on to tell her next door neighbor about. A cheap, splotched blotter, no place for the pens and pencils, an ink bottle with the top lost—such things as these.

What a change you could bring about not only in the appearance of your desk, but in the tidy, well-appointed look of your whole room, with the beaten copper or Chinese hand-etched desk sets on sale in an F street store. They include desk pad, with metal corners, paper knife, inkwell, pen tray, letter holder, stamp box and rocker blotter.

Even if your husband gets up in a good humor he reverts to type after sitting for half an hour in the hard breakfast room chairs. You know what you can do to apply the oil which keeps the domestic situation running smoothly and easily? Betake yourself to a G street store and buy some of the no tack chair pads, 25 cents apiece. Cover them in flowered chintz, if you like, and make your dinette more comfortable and even more attractive looking.

Music will out, you know. If the apple of his father's eye has inclinations that way, all the miniature footballs, baseball bats, fire engines, bicycles and what not aren't going to change the tide of melody within his heart. Dad might as well resign himself to the fact that he may sit in an auditorium some evening and say: "Yes sir, that's my son." He may never go to cheer for Yale, Harvard or Princeton, and tell his neighbors in the grand stand that it's just the chip off the old block who scored the winning touchdown.

So, if the son must have his music lessons, why not comply. It isn't necessary to buy a piano, rent one. A downtown music store has arranged this for you so that you may have one in your home for as little as $4 a month. Or, if you want to buy one, every piano in the house has been reduced 10 per cent.

We're taught from childhood to observe the attractive points of a person rather than harp on the bad ones. If we have taken that lesson to heart, we should go a step further and apply it subjectively. We should learn to bring out our own good points so that the other fellow will not have to search for them. Sometimes we find it easier to be overwhelmed by lesser trifles.

That's the theory. It may be applied, for example, with a small eyelash and eyebrow brush. Your lashes, let's say, are long and curling, but so light on the ends that they are scarcely noticeable. With one of the specially fine brushes to be bought in a Connecticut avenue shop for 25 cents you can brush them every morning and thus encourage their growth. And with the same brush you can apply a bit of shading that will accentuate their beauty and attract the onlookers' eye to your eye rather than your pug nose, or broken tooth, as the case may be.

Ocean-Going Chef Offers Meat Pie

Steak and Kidney Combine to Make a Delicious, Novel Dish.

From the chef of the S. S. Mauretania, Raoul Ricault, we have obtained a novel and delectable dish. There are meat pies and meat pies, but this combination of steak and kidney should please the most particular palate. Start off the fall meat menus with a concoction that is really different, and see your husband's eyes widen when you grace your table with this steak and kidney pie:

For six covers: Take 4 pounds of lean beef, 1 ox or 8 sheep's kidneys, chopped onions, parsley and thyme. Cut the beef and kidneys in small flat pieces. Put in a basin, mixed with a little meat stock. Add the onions, parsley, a little thyme, salt, pepper and hot sauce. Fill a deep pie dish, cover with puffed paste and bake in a moderate oven for 2 hours. Serve piping hot.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

If September 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:45 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 3:30 to 4 p. m. and from 8 to 8:50 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 2:15 to 2:45 p. m. and from 6:30 to 7:50 p. m.

Influences operating on this date will tend to bring out the finest that is in you. You will think good thoughts and you will feel impelled to do good and loving deeds, and as a result you will bring happiness into the lives of others as well as into your own. Teachers will get good results from their classes on this day for their work will seem inspired.

The child born on this September 19 will probably have an active mind that will show itself in an ever active and often restless little body. Never idle for a moment, this child will turn its hands to making things. The child will be interested in doing things only if tangible and immediate results are apparent; will never be one to build for the future.

If September 19 is the date of your birth, you need never fear of not being always amply cared for. The chances are that you will provide for yourself enough to carry you through your days on earth, but if not, others will take great joy and pleasure in doing and caring for you. Much of your life will be spent in doing things for others. Often to the neglect of your own affairs, you devote your time to fixing something for another's good. The women spend a great deal of time and money in charitable works; organizing charities and charitable functions, sewing for the poor, feeding the hungry, these and other things occupy their days. You are a person who is inclined to think too much about himself; when not occupied, your thoughts tend to turn inward. Many women born on this day, if not married and mothers, go into business and attain no small measure of success.

Born on September 19, you are possessed of a strong sense of loyalty; particularly is this noticeable in your relations with your family. Many is the time that a dear one turns to you for help and support, and unless you take care, you will assume more burdens and responsibilities than you can sustain. Don't let your family smother you and tie you down. Your love for your mate will be a very beautiful thing, and there should be little friction between you.

The Family Marketer

Crab Apples Diminishing and Those Who Want Jelly Must Act Soon.

Crabapples which we noticed on the market the other day—and thought little about—are coming to the fore in more ways than one.

According to produce dealers, the supply this season will be both light and short. The great majority of those which appear in Washington are shipped from New Jersey and already that State is unable to fill all the orders, so scarce have they become.

A wholesale dealer says that last year he ordered eight carloads of the apples, whereas this year he has had difficulty getting one carload. He added that he doubts whether he will be able to get any from New York State.

It's Jelly That Counts.

And why such a furor about crabapples, the Marketer wanted to know? The answer came in large type accents, "jelly!"

The humble looking little crabapples have a way of surpassing their large, rosy cousins, the eating apples, in this regard. They offer a flavor, a tartness, an interest to jelly that very few fruits on the market have.

It lends itself to any menu, being almost an essential for a duck dinner, a fried chicken supper, or a cold meat luncheon.

In the face of all this, can you resist donning your apron, betaking yourself to kitchen and putting away at least half dozen or a dozen glasses of the delectable crab-apple jelly? When you buy the chief ingredient, you will find it much cheaper to buy them in wholesale quantity, where you pay only $1.75 a bushel.

Peaches Near Windup.

It's rather too bad, but it's true, the last of the first quality peaches are on the market now. After this week, we will encounter only stragglers that come to supply a demand. There's a moral—if you want good peaches, don't put off till tomorrow what you can do today; go down and buy now.

You'll find very good Elbertas on the market. This freestone variety is neither for pickling, nor brandying, but ideal for between meals, desserts and preserving. One bushel will cost you $2. You can buy a slightly inferior quality for less.

Seckel Pears in Market.

New York State may fall down on us in regard to the spiteful crabapples, but they're doing right by us with their Seckel pears. You may not like pickles, but the chances are you'll qualify your taste when you've partaken of the Seckel pear sweet pickle. They're a cross between a spicy preserve and an honest-to-goodness pickle. You can buy them by the bushel for $1.75, medium size; $2 for the larger ones.

Crabapples, peaches and pears just about cover the jelly, preserve and pickle situation, but there are still the relishes to be considered.

Nature has fully equipped the sweet Spanish onions' to care for these. Chop them up, mix with peppers and whatever spices you prefer, and you have the fundamentals for a relish to be relished.

Buy these retail and you'll pay anywhere from 5 cents apiece for them to 10 cents for three. At wholesale they come in 50-pound bags for $2.

The Stranger.

By Katherine W. Smith.

I used to look for you in streets,
Where people passed me, to and fro;
I saw your eyes in strangers' eyes
And heard your voice, sweet and slow

Call out to me from other lips;
But when I see your face, a change
Has made me see too far, and now
Your once dear lips and eyes are strange.

Church Tells Its Flock All Bills Voided

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 18.—St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church of Toledo has decided that if the church taught others "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," it should be the first to forgive.

Accordingly, the Rev. S. C. Michelfelder has announced, the church, which has 2,400 active members and is the largest in the American Lutheran Church, has "forgiven" more than $26,000 in unpaid pledges of its communicants.

A resolution passed by the vestry reads:

"In appreciation of God's blessing in preserving our church in the perilous times of depression, and in keeping with the spirit of the President's recovery plan, we, the vestry of St. Paul's Evengelical Lutheran Church, of Toledo, Ohio, hereby cancel all obligations of our members to our church due before January 1, 1933."

Spirit of the Day.

"The spirit of the day prompted this action," explains the Rev. Michelfelder. "We believe that many of our people having made pledges in good faith, but unable to pay them, are burdened by the debt they owe the church. We believe that the church which would teach others to pray the Lord's Prayer, should be the first to forgive."

Described by the pastor as the largest Protestant church in Toledo, St. Paul's each year asks for pledges from each communicant for the general fund from which the church is maintained. In addition, special pledges are made to a building fund.

The last building fund solicitation was in 1928, from which $13,000 in unpaid pledges were canceled. The remainder was in general fund pledges made over the past four years.

New Books Started.

At the end of this year, the pastor states, new ledger sheets will be started, and unpaid balances before January 1, 1933, will not be carried over. The arrears simply will be "forgiven and forgotten."

A definite weekly pledge will be asked of each communicant to finance the church during the next year. Those unable to make a pledge will be asked to place an empty envelope on the plate at the services.

Depression Boosts Pay For Women

Their Fight for Better Times Brings Them to Goal Sought for Century.

(Associated Press.)

The "war on the depression," like the World War, is proving to have a sunny side as well as a dark side for the women workers of the Nation.

Now the "war on the depression," women leaders believe, promises to solve partially the wage problem through the new industrial codes. Of the 22 permanent codes which have been signed, only three name different wages for men and women. And of those two provide that where they do similar work they should receive equal wages.

Unions Push Claims.

This sudden winning of the old battle for equal wages is being pushed at code hearings both by women's organizations and by the American Federation of Labor, which has always stood for equal wages.

But, to arrive at this point of dawning victory, women workers have battled through a century that has completely overturned their economic and social status. The century is reviewed in a report just issued by the women's bureau of the Department of Labor.

The revolution in women's industrial standing began in the early ninteenth century with the introduction of the machine, which drew many women from their homes into spinning, weaving and sewing industries.

Factories Are Answer.

As the need to spin, sew, raise food and cook in the home fell, women were forced to find other economic niches in the national life. Factories were the answer. But they remained mainly in the unskilled and low-paid divisions.

However, the need for labor in the World War threw open the gates. Women entered lumber and steel mills, auto and electrical plants, munitions and airplane factories. The wartime increase was not limited to factories. From 1910 to 1920 female school teachers increased one-third.

Women telegraphers doubled.

The wedge gained by the war seems a permanent one. Today there are two and one-fifth millions more women at work than in 1920. And as a result of war work, the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor was founded.

1,500,000 in Factories.

Today there are still three and a half times as many men as women in factories. Of the 1,500,000 women in factory work the majority are in their traditional industries, textiles and clothing.

In 1870 15 per cent of all women over 16 years of age were working. Today the figure is 25.3 per cent. The drift from home to jobs also has increased the number of married women working. The figure jumping from 13.9 per cent in 1890 to 28.9 per cent today.

Throughout the shift which a changing economic scene has forced on women their wages continued to lag far behind men's. For the years 1922-1932 the United States Bureau of Labor statistics show that women's average earnings in nine important industries were only from 45 to 54 per cent of men's.

"Terrible Consequences."

The Women's Bureau says: "In an industrial system where profits depend on low production costs, the temptation has been to pay the lowest possible wages. The terrible consequences of women struggling on wages too low to support health is undisputed. But further, because men and women are competitors in the labor market, women's low wages tend to drag down those of men. As industry becomes more and more machine tending and skilled jobs fewer, the wage level of the mass of workers is likely to adjust itself to the low level set for women."

Like men, working women were forced to organize labor unions for self-protection. Women tailors in New York formed the first women's union in 1825. The first women's strike occurred in 1828 at Dover, N. H.

While men turned to strikes to gain better conditions, women preferred legislation. In 11 States today women's working ohurs are limited to 8; in 16 States night work for women is prohibited; in 47, seating accomodations for women are required by law; in 8 there are minimum wage laws for women; in 14 there are laws regulating sanitation, light and ventilation for home workers.

Velveteen Comes Back for Autumn

Velveteen is being resurrected for 1933, with its quaint suggestion of school girlishness. Made into a tailored shirtmaker dress, it has a youthful air and a utilitarian aspect which recommends it to collegian and business woman alike. Velveteen jackets are being worn with plaid woolen skirts, for spectator sports, and for early fall street wear.

Use Hair for Darning

Moth holes in woolen material can be darned with hair. If your own is long enough, so much the better; if not, persuade some kind friend to allow you to pluck a few. Hair is strong, and a clever needlewoman can make the darn almost invisible.

Truant Officers in Capital Are Few—But Very Busy!

One to Every 7,000 Pupils Not Enough, Says Woman Director.

The fabled woman who lived in the shoe was a person of leisure compared to Washington's school attendance officers, whose busy season returned again yesterday.

With a school attendance in excess of 105,000, in public, private and parochial schools, the District Department of Education provides only one attendance officer for every 7,000 students.

"There should be a school attendance officer for every 1,500 to 2,000 children, if truant students are to be given the type of social case work they require," competent Fay Bentley, director of the Department of School Attendance since its organization here in 1925, said yesterday.

Child Care Is Sole Job.

Refreshed from a two weeks' absence from her desk, the quiet, clear-eyed, brown-haired educator-executive was busy with school reports and census surveys at her office in the Franklin School Building, Thirteenth and K streets northwest.

"The sole purpose of our department is to serve the child," Miss Bentley said. "Proper handling of truancy is one of the most important factors in dealing with delinquency. Nearly every criminal career can be traced to a beginning in truancy from school.

"We are constantly checking this situation. Last week our workers visited 200 Washington homes, where children, too ill last year to attend school, were excused from class attendance on the basis of a physician's certificate.

"The survey was to determine if some of them can not return to regular classes this year, or possibly be entered in one of our special schools for crippled or tubercular children. It is our responsibility to see that these children keep abreast of their classes, if possible.

Need "Bedside" Teachers.

"The situation would be ideally met through a corps of home instructors, or 'bedside teachers,' as they are called in some cities. It is well known that the physical and mental condition of sick children is improved by class instruction. This has been proved at Children's Hospital here. However, the Washington public school system does not yet have such a service."

Miss Bentley told of the tremendous strain felt by the school system and social agencies of Washington, last year, in making education possible for children in 1,258 cases, where family rehabilitation work had to be done.

"When a child of school age is found to have neither proper food nor clothing it isn't just a matter of providing some clothes and giving him hot soup at school," she remarked. "We have to go deeper into the matter than that. His background has to be corrected if he is to derive any real benefits from the class room.

Need of Food No Bar.

"No child should be irregular in school because of lack of food, clothing or car fare, yet these are existing causes which require social case work adjustment of a kind which our understaffed school system can not provide.

"Were it not for the ready cooperation given us by the Associated Charities, the Catholic Charities, the Hebrew Relief and the Juvenile Protective Association we could not maintian the attendance standard that we do," she said.

Parent-teacher associations work with school authorities in providing clothing for underprivileged children. In wealthier districts in the city clothing is collected through these organizations, working with the schools, and is distributed on request to school principals in those districts where family resources are not commensurate with the children's needs.

Allowing a fortnight's grace from the official school opening date, yesterday, to take care of students whose parents may be late returning from summer resorts, the Department of School Attendance on October 2 will begin its annual check of actual school enrollment.

All to Be Catalogued.

When it is finished, a record will exist on the whereabouts of every boy and girl between the ages of 7 and 16 years, who was living in Washington last summer. It will be known whether they are attending a public, private or parochial school, are being privately tutored or have left town.

"We serve the child," Miss Bentley repeated, and smiled.

"We guarantee, through our activities, that every person in Washington, between the ages of 7 and 16 years, shall be in school by mid-October, providing they personally are in physical or mental condition to attend."

Cuban Visitor Honor Guest At Luncheon

Dr. Silvero, Pan American Association Officer, Entertained Here.

Dr. J. E. Lopez Silvero, of Havana, secretary-general of the Pan-American Medical Association, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Dr. Jose Guillermo Lewis, vice president of the Pan-American Medical Association, at the Shoreham Hotel, yesterday.

There are moments when even the most efficient housewife opens her refrigerator door to find nothing but a few oranges, a couple of lemons or grapefruit and perhaps a can of pineapple. And this array, with a dessert to make for a family who must have a "made" dessert, induces a slight sinking feeling—especially in the case of young housewives of limited culinary experience.

But the veteran housekeeper knows these odds and ends of fruit plus a package of quick-cooking tapioca can be turned into a choice of several delicious desserts. Here they are:

Celestine Lemon Tapioca.

½ teaspoon salt
1 quart boiling water
1 cup sugar
½ cup lemon juice (2 lemons)
grated rind 1 lemon
1 cup cream, whipped

Add tapioca and salt to water and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add sugar, lemon juice and lemon rind. Cool. Fold in whipped cream. Chill until thickened. Pile lightly in sherbert glasses. Garnish with maraschino cherries. Serves eight.

Pineapple Tapioca.

¼ teaspoon salt
4 cups hot pineapple juice and water
½ cup sugar
1 cup canned pineapple, grated or finely cut

Add tapioca and salt to pineapple juice and water and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add sugar and pineapple and chill. Serve with whipped cream. Serves eight.

Chantilly Orange Tapioca.

4 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon salt
1 1-3 cups boiling water
½ cup sugar
1 cup orange juice
Grated rind ½ orange
½ cup cream, whipped

Add tapioca and salt to water and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add sugar, orange juice and orange rind. Cool. Fold in whipped cream. Chill until thickened. Pile lightly in sherbet glasses. Just before serving, garnish with very fine ¼-inch shreds of orange rind, free from all white membrane. Serves six.

Ammonia Cleans Brushes Easily

Hair brushes and combs can be cleaned in a jiffy in warm water and ammonia. Add about two tablespoons or more of ammonia to a quart of water, throw in your brushes and combs and watch the dirt dissolve. When drying brushes let them lie on their bristles. If they are laid on their backs the water, instead of running out, will seep into the base and weaken the brush.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Spendthrifts.

The men who still have ample cash maintain the same in brine; for they recall the frightful crash that came in '29. Before that time they used to spend like princes of the realm, but all expenditures must end when panics overwhelm. My good old friend the millionaire once bought a car each year, and on the village thoroughfare in state he would appear. He bought the finest car there was, and paid the money down; he was a sort of Santa Claus to dealers here in town. He still might buy a car each year, or haply one each week; but he has got the common fear, the outlook dark and bleak. He drives a bus of ancient date, back-numberish and quaint, it rattles at a grevious rate, it needs a coat of paint. In vain the dealers mildly hint he needs a car that's new, upholstered in a cheerful tint, with innards working true. Some day, he says, if things improve, and prospects grow more fair, he may consider such a move, but now he doesn't dare. He has investments going sour, he's lost his privy purse, and every day and every hour he looks for something worse. This is the world-wide attitude that must be overcome before depression can be shooed, before things start to hum. If every man who has the price would buy the things he needs, this stimulus might well suffice to bring the higher speeds.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Th Forties Are in Luck.

Dr. W. B. Pitkin has written a book entitled "Life Begins at 40." His theory is that middle-aged persons are or should be the most efficient as well as the happiest of all peoples. However, he is fair. In setting down the losses occasioned by the progress of the years, he gives the following facts:

The metabolic rate is a measure of the rate of combustion of the human fires. The thyroid secretion is the agent which determines the rate at which the fires burn, the fuel used is the food eaten up and certain parts of the tissue, and the product is heat and energy. The metabolic rate is measured by catching the breath for a specified time, analyzing it to determine how much smoke—in this instance called carbonic acid—it contains and using this and the body weight to calculate the metabolic rate. We set the normal metabolic rate as 100. Pitkins says if the rate which is normal at age 12 is set at 100, that which is normal at age of 17 is 80. There is no further decline until age 35. Between that and age 40 there is a slight decrease. This decrease is somewhat more rapid from age 40 to age 53. From that to age 60 it is more rapid.

At age 60 the normal rate is 56, assuming that of age 12 to be 100. The decline in the efficiency of the endocrine glands, Pitkin says, begins at age 45. However, that depends on which endocrine we have in mind as well as the individual. The thymus, if it is an endocrine, has dried up, and, physiologically, is inactive years before age 45, or even 30. The pineal, if he has an endocrine function, is inactive after the years of pubertal growth.

Myxedema, an inactivity of the thyroid, is most in evidence around age 50. The ovary becomes inactive at a somewhat earlier age. It is claimed that enlargement of the prostate, which is much in evidence at age 60, is due to inactivity of the male gonads and of the anterior pituitary.

Pitkin says the brain grows irregularly and slowly up to age 35. At that time it begins to lose weight slowly. At age 65 it has suffered a loss of 1,500 grains in weight. The reference is to change in size and weight of the brain and not to its capacity.

There is some loss of keenness of hearing soon after man passes age 30. The ear muscles are slow in adjusting the tension of the ear drum.

Pitkin sets ages 37 and 38 as the period in which there is greatest decline in physical energy. The loss in dexterity and minipulative skill depends very much upon the nature of the effort required and the person under test. Pitkin found that the people who were engaged daily in doing certain work had suffered no loss of dexterity at age 50 in the doing of that particular task. However, when set to doing another task the story was somewhat different. We hold on to our skill when it comes to doing the things we are trained to do.

Lee Boulevard Land Donated To Link Bridge

Prospects for procuring quickly the right-of-way for the northern connecting link between the Arlington Memorial Bridge and the Lee boulevard were bright yesterday as Dr. Samuel M. Johnson, president of the Lee Boulevard Association, said this organization had approved the new route and some land had already been donated. Charles D. Douglas has given six lots for the 200-foot right-of-way, and has promised to give any further land owned by him if it is needed. This gift depends on road work starting within a year.

Dr. Johnson said he had also called on other persons owning land to be traversed by the new highway and that they were willing to take "a fair price." The new route, approved by the Fine Arts Commission and the Park and Planning Commission, runs around the north side of Arlington Cemetery and Fort Myer to connect with the present terminus of the boulevard at Lyon Park.

Group Action Urged to Avoid Debt Losses

W. G. Buchanan Points Way for Credit Men to Reduce Bankruptcies.

Credit men are sponsoring group action to reduce annual bad debt losses. Coordinated cooperative action on the part of firms estimating credit is the only means of reducing this waste.

William Gordon Buchanan, partner in the auditing firm of Councilor & Buchanan, and member of the Washington Association of Credit Men, said this yesterday in an interview. Mr. Buchanan recently was elected a director of the National Association of Credit Men.

Discussing the strength and value of group action, Mr. Buchanan said the necessity for cooperation applied both to the gathering of credit information and to the measures taken by creditors to protect their accounts when debtors get into difficulties.

Exchange of Information.

"Only by frank exchange of information between interested parties in all fields of business will it ever be possible to note the early symptoms of approaching bankruptcy and take effective steps to ward it off. Furthermore, the accumulation and dissemination of credit data can not, by the very nature of business today, be strictly local, purely sectional, or limited to a single industry.

"It must be diversified in scope if we are to arrive at the true credit picture which is essential to a proper analysis of a customer's condition.

"No single unit serving a single industry can hope to give more than partial information. Long experience has taught us that anything less than complete information is too often dangerously misleading."

Anticipation of Bankruptcy.

Mr. Buchanan emphasized that the modern tendency in credit work is toward the anticipation of bankruptcy with a view to preventing it. The advantage of this method, he said, is that the customer can frequently be kept in business and retained as a customer.

"Where the creditors get into the picture early, before the debtor has slipped too far, there is usually an excellent chance of keeping him from slipping over the brink. Where the creditors are unwilling to cooperate and engage in a greedy scramble to collect their accounts regardless of the other fellow, the result is almost certain to be bankruptcy, with a loss to all concerned.

"The toll levied on business by credit losses in the United States last year was considerably more than $1,000,000,000. Every credit manager knows that the total bad debt loss, both retail and wholesale, is far greater than the loss through bankruptcy."

Reduction of Losses.

Mr. Buchanan said that he brought out these figures in order to emphasize the necessity for reducing the loss through every means available.

"The most effective way I know for attacking this huge waste," he said, "is through increased cooperation of creditor firms, both in the interchange of credit information and in the conservation of assets of insolvent debtors.

Furthermore, only by cooperative appraising and preventive measures in mercantile credit practice can a sound and fluid bank credit situation be maintained. A sound bank credit situation in turn is the very basis of national stability."

"The manufacturers, wholesalers and bankers of the Washington Association of Credit Men have taken a long step forward by maintaining through the Washington Association of Credit Men an adjustment bureau which will assist them in taking constructive action for the benefit of all creditors whenever business failures occur or appear imminent."

Aid of Bureau.

"Experience throughout the United States has proved, beyond any doubt, that the adjustment bureau provides the best possible machinery for safeguarding the interest of creditors, both in the salvage of bad and doubtful accounts and in the constructive rehabilitation of deserving debtors."

Preparation for insurance of bank deposits was begun here yesterday. Washington banks not members of the Federal Reserve System, received blanks yesterday requesting reports incidental to membership in the Federal Guarantee Deposit Corporation.

These blanks were sent to approximately 6,000 banks throughout the United States.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—August deliveries of crude oil by the eight pipe line companies comprising the old Standard Oil Co. totaled 8,567,754 barrels, a daily average of 276,379. This compared with 7,308,553 barrels, or 235,760 daily, in August, 1932.

Dow, Jones & Co. said today that it was "practically certain" September would bring a net gain in telephone stations for the Bell system. Operating companies are now reporting that losses have either been converted into net gains or that new installations are balancing disconnections. There has been a consistent monthly decrease since late in 1930. September usually sees a seasonal upturn.

Directors of Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co., a New York City traction, voted today to redeem $1,000,000 of the company's two-year 6 per cent notes on October 10, this will reduce the original $13,500,000 issue to $8,500,000.

National Tea Co. sales for the four weeks ended September 9 amounted to $4,474,520 compared with $4,677,734 in the corresponding period last year. As of this date the company was 1,317 stores in operation against 1,445 a year ago.

There were 186,394 holders of United States Steel Corporation common stock on September 1. Three months previous the holders numbered 189,569 while on September 1, 1932, the stock was held by 190,284 individuals.

California May Vie In Cattle Raising

Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—California soon will be the Nation's source of breeding stock for both dairy and beef cattle, according to predictions of Dean H. H. Kildee, of the Iowa State College of Agriculture, and Kenneth C. Ikeler, Union Stockyards manager at Ogden, Utah.

Ikeler's concurrence came after judging beef cattle at the fair.

Kildee said the uniformity shown in cattle exhibited there was astonishing, demonstrating that California's climate exerts a beneficial influence on stock strains.

Curb's Prices Are Irregular In Active Sales

Heavy Demand for Metals Brings Gains; Trading, 449,000 Shares.

Heavy demand for metal shares, which carried the group to new high levels for the year, was offset by reactionary tendencies in utilities and a number of industrials. Oils were firm in quiet trading.

Bunker Hill & Sullivan soared 5½ points in light dealings while among more active members of the mining group advances of 1 to 2 were recorded by Lake Shore Mines, Newmont and International Mining, Humble Oil and Standard Oil of Ohio gained 2 points apiece, but other petroleum shares showed narrow changes.

Trading assumed fairly active proportions at times, sales approximating 449,000 shares compared with 389,000 for last Friday.

U. S. Dollar Sinks To 65 Cents Gold

Value Is Lowest Recorded in Half Century; Laid to Speculation.

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Another relapse in the gold value of the dollar to approximately 65 cents, the lowest in more than half a century, prompted only scattered buying in speculative markets today.

Pressure against the dollar was again regarded as largely speculative selling originating from abroad, prompted by renewed agitation for inflation by some senators in Washington. Bankers said, however, the exchange control was not strict enough to prevent a considerable seepage of frightened capital from this country, which also was doubtless a factor, although the movement was not believed to be large. It was explained that the market for dollars remained extremely thin, so that it fluctuated widely in small dealings.

Foreign advices to Wall street indicated that European financial centers were watching the action of the dollar almost to the exclusion of everything else. The London stock market was uncertain and inclined to sag, while the Paris bourse was irregular.

Stocks Driven Lower As Dollar Sinks Abroad

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—The dollar's fall to around 65 cents, gold value, was accompanied by confused and erratic movements in stock prices today. Most of the New York commodity markets were firm to strong.

Oil and metal issues held to the advance which the share list had undertaken on Saturday, but other groups, after an early spurt, looked as though declining dollar exchange had little attraction for the speculative fraternity. Extreme losses through most of the market were eventually reduced, but closing prices were irregularly lower. Numerous leader were off a point or more. Sales aggregated 2,722,110 shares.

French francs topped 6 cents and sterling had a brisk advance. Several continental units went to new highs. Silver currencies advanced with the stronger market for that metal, spot silver coming close to its three-year high made around mid-July.

Stock exchange traders were faced with word of further slackening in the steel industry and the possibility that the sag would be extended unless new buying developed rather promptly. U. S. Steel issues bogged down, the common losing a couple of points and the preferred approximately twice as much. Allied Chemical and American Can bucked the trend; the former made a new high. Westinghouse, Du Pont, Union Carbide, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, North American, Chrysler, Case and American Tobacco "B" were off 1 to nearly 2.

Rails, on the whole, were moderately lower, though Union Pacific lost 2½. First figures for last week's traffic indicated the expectable upturn from Labor Day week. Oils were led by Standards of New Jersey and California, Seaboard, Amerada, Ohio, and Texas Corporation, which advanced major fractions to around 2 points net. Dairy stocks were heavy.

In the mining sector, Homestake soared to $88 a share and closed at $365 for a $14 net gain. U. S. Smelting was up around 4, while American Smelting, McIntyre and Dome had good markets.

Silver Price Advance Is Greatest for Year

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—The spot silver market had one of the sharpest advances of the year today, rising 1⅞ cents to 40⅛ cents an ounce. On the Commodity Exchange, Inc., silver futures were up from ⅝ to 1 cent an ounce in heavy trading.

At today's level, spot metal was only a shade under the year's high of 40⅜ cents, established on July 18. That price stands as the highest since May, 1930.

London—Business on the stock exchange was generally quiet today. Kaffirs were idle despite the rise in the price of bar gold while international issues were mostly better on Wall street reports. German bonds improved and oil shares hardened owing to favorable reports from America. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The upturn in Wall street and the slump of the dollar failed to stimulate prices on the bourse which were markedly irregular. Rentes and Suez shares improved while oil and mining issues declined. French industrials were firm. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—Influenced unfavorably by the withdrawal of brokers' admission tickets by administrators of the exchange in order to reorganize with a restricted Jewish membership. Prices on the boerse were generally weaker.

Wool Market.

Boston, Sept. 18 (A.P.) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—The recent demand for wool apparently has been based to a large extent upon immediate needs. Manufacturers' requests for prompt delivery of purchases and their interest in further quantities tend to confirm reports of an active goods market.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ended September 16, amounted to 899,000 pounds as compared with 1,324,200 during the previous week. Reported receipts for the last year to date amount to 214,522,400 pounds compared with 174,986,500 during the corresponding period last year.

Bonds Decline As U. S. Money Slumps Again

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Further inflationary implications accompanying another sharp slump of international dollar rates gave the bond market some real reactionary twings today and prices of the more active issues generally finished with substantial losses.

Prime investment loans, which have held rather steady for some time, sagged with the secondary groups and losses of 1 to 4 or more points were scattered throughout all categories. The rails and utilities were the principal sufferers, although the industrials showed little resistance. United States Government securities eased.

Sales expanded to $13,430,000, par value, on the relapse and the average for 60 domestic corporate maturities was off one-tenths of a point. This was the largest average decline since July 21, last.

Among the higher-priced victims of liquidation were American Telephone debenture 5's, off 2¼; Atlantic Refining 5's, off 1¾; Santa Fe general 4's, off 2¾; Baltimore & Ohio first 4's, off 3; Bethlehem Steel 5's, off 1; Columbia Gas 5's, off 3½; Detroit Edison 4½'s, off 3¾; Louisville Gas 5's, off 3; Midvale Steel 5's, off 1¾; Philadelphia Electric 4's, off 2½; Tennessee Electric Power 6's, off 2¾; Western Union 5's, off 2¼; Union Pacific refunding 4's and 5's, off 3 each, and Virginia Railway 5's, off 3¾.

Canadian National Railway bonds were in heavy demand for gains of a point or more, but carrier losers of 1 to more than 4 included some liens on Alleghany Corporation, Central Pacific, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Chesapeake Corporation, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, K. C. Southern, N. Y. Central, Nickle Plate, Southern Pacific and Wabash.

Wool Futures Prices Climb During Week

New York, Sept. 18.—Prices of wool top futures on the New York Wool Top Exchange advanced steadily into new high ground during the past week. Friday's price of 104.3 cents for the March contract was a record high for any month since the exchange opened over two years ago. The market showed a net advance for the week of from 7 to 19 points. While there continued to be a good demand for tops, a scarcity of offerings restricted any larger volume of trading.

The Boston spot price of the exchange standard top closed the week with a new high of 108 cents, up 1 cent from the close of a week ago.

Wool top futures in foreign markets closed the week somewhat easier. Prices at Antwerp were off five-eighths of a penny on all active months while prices at Roubaix declined 70 to 80 centimes from the close of the previous week. Bradford spot quotations were unchanged on the lower grades to up ½ to 1⅛ pennies on the higher grades.

Wheat Closes Higher After Wide Changes

Advances of 13 Cents Cut by Fraction; Oats Up; Corn Declines.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP).—Like the army that marched up the hill and then marched down again, the wheat market got plenty of action today and did nothing else in particular.

Advancing to sharply above $1 and to more than 13 cents above last week's low, wheat showed itself responsive temporarily to inflation talk, but displayed even greater readiness to fall back on account of general desire to realize quick profits. Offerings became scarce, however, when prices at one stage went below Saturday's finish.

Wheat closed steady, unchanged to ¼ cent higher; corn, ⅝ to 1⅛ down; oats, unchanged to ⅜ up, and provisions 10 to 30 cents advanced.

Exchange and Gold.

A steep rise in British exchange and a new upturn in the Washington price of gold went hand in hand with early broad speculative buying of wheat. The market soared 2 cents a bushel, and during a considerable period gave evidence of power to rally strongly from setbacks that resulted from profit-taking sales. Most of the buying, though, came from miscellaneous sources and there was little evidence of the concentrated Eastern buying which had been a big factor on Saturday.

Besides, numerous Chicago operators who were active buyers of wheat Saturday turned to the selling side today. This put more weight on the market than could be readily absorbed, and prices dropped an extreme of almost 3 cents from the day's top. Supporting orders were uncovered on the break. Canadian reports told of wet weather impeding threshers and causing heavy deterioration of the quality of wheat even in the best crop areas.

Corn values were handicapped owing to enlarged receipts and to heavy rural selling of corn to arrive. Oats chiefly followed the action of wheat.

Grain Men Urged To Back Roosevelt

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP).—Grain men of the Nation in annual convention here today were urged in an address prepared for delivery by President Peter B. Carey, of the Chicago Board of Trade, to do their "utmost as grain men and as citizens to aid the Washington administration in its struggle to bring back better times."

Addressing the Grain and Feed Dealers National Association, President Carey said: "I can not help but maintain an optimistic outlook for the future of business in general, including agriculture and the grain trade. Grain prices have more than doubled their lows of the year and have enhanced the feeling of hopefulness."

"In its brief time in office, the Washington administration has brought about an "almost miraculous psychological change," Carey said, adding: "While all of us in the agricultural trades perhaps can not give sweeping indorsement to every provision of the agricultural program, we can at least have open minds, confidence in the leaders who are carrying out the gigantic task, and lend all fair and reasonable assistance to a Government that never before has faced such momentous problems and never before has shown greater courage in efforts looking to solution." George E. Booth, president of the association, said the first round of a national battle against economic distress and the human misery attending it has been won decisively by the administration and the American public.

Stevenson Listed To Talk in Chicago

Chicago, Sept. 18 (Spl.).—William F. Stevenson, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, D. C., will deliver an address on "Mortgage Bankers and Their Relationship to Government Credit Agencies" at the twentieth annual convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America to be held in St. Louis, Mo., on October 10 and 11.

It is felt by many that this address will be of special importance, not only to mortgage bankers and other business men interested in the field of real estate finance, but also to the great mass of home owners located throughout the entire United States.

Mr. Stevenson will stress in his address the value of the new Home Owners Loan Corporation, which is administered by the Home Loan Bank Board, insofar as it is proving helpful to home owners in retaining their holdings and easing their financial burdens. He will give a detailed explanation of this act. Mr. Stevenson will also touch on the relationship of mortgage banking to other Government credit agencies, and following his speech an informal discussion will be held.

Brazilian Oranges Compete With U. S.

Paris, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Steps have been started to create a market in France for Brazil oranges, favored by cheap ocean rates, to take this ten million franc commerce away from orange growers of Spain, Florida and California. It is anticipated that negotiations will feature the discussions over a new minimum rate for oranges will feature the discussions over a new Franco-Brazilian commercial treaty.

At the present time, American exports enjoy a minimum tariff for their oranges, but the American fruit is carried on costly refrigerator ships. The California fruit must pass through the Panama Canal, where the tolls increase considerably the ocean freight rates.

The importation of Brazilian oranges has been discussed at various times without actual results, although recently the Ministry of Commerce studied a definite plan whereby France would favor Brazilian orange imports if Brazil granted certain tariff favors.

With the reopening of commercial treaty discussions, this project will come up anew.

Netherlands Bank Rate Cut.

Amsterdam, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Netherlands Bank today lowered its discount rate from 3 to 2½ per cent.

Paris Tapestry Industry Seen Slowly Dying

Paris, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Unless some arrangement is made whereby the tapestries from Aubusson may enter the United States free of duty, a more than 400-year-old business is threatened with extinction.

A plea to save the Aubusson tapestry industry has been made by the city of Aubusson to Anatole de Monzie, Minister of Beaux-Arts. Three-fourths of the artists and weavers, whose craft was handed down to them through generations, are jobless. Because of the smallness of an emergency fund available, these trained craftsmen must rely upon odd jobs.

Ever since the beginning of the depression many of the finest tapestries, which were in preparation for years, have been in storehouses. The workers believe that if the tapestries were permitted to enter the United States free of duty that the retail price then would come within range of a probable purchase price for Americans. The inhabitants conveyed the information to Minister Monzie that they were unable to compete with the workers at Gobelins and Beauvais because those factories were subsidized by the French government.

August Construction Contracts Set Highest Mark for Years

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—August construction contracts totaling $106,131,000, attained the largest volume for any month this year and were about 28 per cent above the July total, reports F. W. Dodge corp.

The gain over July was due entirely to increased activity in public works and public utilities. The August total for the former was more than twice that of July, while utility contracts were nearly five times those of the previous month.

August residential awards aggregated $21,937,000 against $23,630,400 in July and $20,766,800 for August, 1932. Gains over a year ago were reported in New England, the southeast, central Northwest, southern Michigan, the St. Louis and Kansas City districts and Texas. Improvement in nonresidential building over August, 1932, was shown in Metropolitan New York, the Pittsburgh area, the southeast, southern Michigan, the St. Louis district and the New Orleans territory.

The full year's construction contract total, says the corporation, now appears to range betwen $1,000,000,000 and $1,100,000,000 for the Thirty-seven States East of the Rockies for which it compiles statistics. This would compare with $1,351,158,700 in 1932.

Home Loan Bond Dealing Resumed

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—The new Real Estate Securities Exchange has resumed trading in the Government's Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds and interim certificates on a "when issued" basis.

The bid price today was around 90, compared with an initial price of 85 a few weeks ago and a high of 92½. Activity in the issue is light, traders say, because of the small volume thus far announced.

Trading in the securities was suspended by the exchange early this month pending clarification of their status by Washington, but dealings have since been resumed.

Visible Supply of Grain.

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes, in bushels: Wheat increased 1,813,000; corn increased 703,000; oats increased 896,000; rye increased 232,000; barley increased 222,000.

Missouri River Improvement To Aid 4 States

Nebraska City, Nebr., Sept. 18 (U.P.). A new era for the upper Missouri River Valley was visioned by leaders of this section as allocation by the Federal Public Works administration of $14,000,000 for river development marked the first step toward realization of an old dream.

For years this section has dreamed of a 9-foot channel in the Missouri River, between Kansas City, Mo., and Sioux City, Iowa. The fight has been carried to Congress to make it possible for Iowa, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Missouri to find a cheap means of transportation to the markets of the country.

Announcement by Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes that the $14,000,000 has been allotted for development of a 6-foot channel as the first step toward the 9-foot channel was hailed as the realization of the dreams.

Development of the river means that great industrial progress for Nebraska and surrounding States will follow, according to Fred Eissler, president of the Nebraska State Federation of Labor.

Clarkesburg Seeks Courthouse Bids

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 18 (Spl.).—The Preston County court has instructed the county clerk, P. F. King, to advertise immediately for bids for the construction of a new court house at Kingwood to cost within $93,000. Plans for the structure have been completed by a Williamstown architect, and as soon as the contract is awarded work will be started. Bids may be filed up until 2 p. m. October 3.

The present court house will be torn down and part of the material used in the new building. The exterior will be of native sawed limestone quarried two miles south of Kingwood. The new building will occupy the site of the old one.

This will be Preston County's third court house. The first was destroyed by fire in 1869. The present one was started that year and completed in 1870, at a cost of only $11,000.

Steel Mills Employment Is Highest Since 1929

Indiana Harbor, Ind., Sept. 18 (AP). Nearly 12,000 persons were at work today in local steel mills, the highest pay roll since the 13,000 peak in 1929. Inland Steel is using 7,400 and Youngstown 4,500.

Cotton Prices Climb $2 On Trade Buying

December Sells at 10.16 as General Market Rises 38 to 42 Points.

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—A further advance of approximately $2 per bale in cotton today was attributed to active general buying promoted by continued talk of inflation, weakness in the dollar and relatively steady Liverpool cables.

Early advances of 37 to 40 points were followed by moderate reactions, but the market firmed up again with December contracts after reacting from 10.15 to 10.04 advancing to 10.18 and closing at 10.16, the general market closed firm at net advances of 38 to 42 points.

Opening prices were 18 to 24 points higher in response to the Liverpool showing.

Foreign Houses Buy.

Houses with foreign connections were active buyers and there was a broadening commission house or speculative demand as well as a continued demand from trade sources.

Some reactionary sentiment developed, probably in anticipation of increased hedging at the close, but the demand from trade and commission house sources broadened out again in the late trading and prices reached the best levels of the day in the late trading with active months selling 40 to 43 points net higher. Closing quotations were wihtin 2 or 3 points of the best for the day.

Exports today, 29,284, making 952,672 so far this season. Port receipts, 49,254. U. S. port stocks, 3,135,717.

15 Countries Join In Wheat Meeting

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—Fifteen countries were represented today at the first meeting of the wheat advisory committee, of which Robert W. Bingham, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, was appointed chairman.

The committee was established to take over the application of the recently-signed world wheat agreement. This agreement bound producers to restrict output and consumers to stimulate the use of wheat.

Exporting countries represented at the meeting were the United States, Argentina, Canada, Australia, Soviet Russia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Rumania. The importers were Great Britain, France, Italy, Spain, Switzerland, and one of the Scandinavian countries.

Sugar King Sees Prosperity Return

San Francisco, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Voluntary enlistments of Philippine Island industrialists and merchants under the Blue Eagle banner of the NRA were reported here by Rafael R. Alunan, known as the "Sugar King" of Uncle Sam's distant possessions.

"Because of conditions peculior to Uncle Sam's insular possessions, we are exempt from regulations under the Blue Eagle," Alunan said.

"But many firms that can do so are voluntarily enlisting in this program throughout the Philippines. I am convinced this is the agency through which America will lead the world back to prosperity.

"As America goes, so goes the Philippines. Right now there is a great forward movement there businesswise, which is a reflection of the upswing in the United States."

Cinema "Dinner at Eight" Coming to National in October—Boxoffice Champions

Fourteen-Star Attraction Is Road-Show Hit

"Dinner at Eight," that fabulous Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the stage play of the same name by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman, which utilizes the talents of a greater number of stars than "Grand Hotel" and is said by many competent judges to surpass that extraordinary screen play in the distinguished quality of its entertainment, will be presented as a road-show attraction at the National Theater for a limited engagement, beginning Sunday, October 22, according to reliable information reaching this department late yesterday.

Fourteen players of stellar eminence appear in the principal roles of "Dinner at Eight." They are Marie Dressler, John and Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Jean Hersholt, Karen Morley, the late Louise Closser Hale, Phillips Holmes and May Robson.

Two-a-Day Showings.

Supporting this galaxy of brilliant screen luminaries are such capable players as Grant Mitchell, Phoebe Foster, Elizabeth Patterson, Harry Beresford, Edwin Maxwell and John Davidson.

The road-show engagement at the National will be on the usual basis of two performances daily and probably three on Sunday at a scale of admission slightly higher than the customary tariffs assessed in the regular picture houses operating under the "all-day grind" policy.

The booking is at present penciled in for a single week, with the privilege of extending the engagement if attendance and the National's regular bookings of touring dramatic attractions justify it and permit.

The next few weeks promise to be fruitful ones for the veteran May Robson, who, by one of those odd perversities in which the theater is so prolific, is only now reaping the rewards of a lifetime of notable effort both behind the footlights and before the cameras. She will soon be seen at RKO-Keith's as the outstanding star of "Lady for a Day," at the National in "Dinner at Eight" and now is Hollywood-bound to co-star with Polly Moran in a new picture for M-G-M, which, it is expected, will establish her as the logical successor of the revered Marie Dressler.

One is constrained to believe from recent announcements that it may not be so bad, after all, this "leading a dog's life."

For instance, Flush, Elizabeth Barrett's spaniel, and Flush, the dog actor that appeared with Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," both are receiving attention from the literary world this fall.

Robert M. McBride & Co., have published "Flush of Wimpole Street and Broadway," an "autobiography" of the canine player by Flora Merrill, with illustrations by the illustrious "Edwina."

"Flush," a biography of the actual Flush, written by Virginia Woolf, the eminent English novelist, will be published in this country on October 5, by Harcourt, Brace & Co.

With George Kosloff, founder of the famous Katinka Club in New York—if you have ever heard of the Katinka Club in New York—as manager, the Russian Troika will stage a gala reopening on Friday evening of this week, September 22, at the supper hour. Mischa Markoff—which is what a great many patrons wish he would do to the check—who won a host of friends here last season will be one of the headliners of the floor show and in addition will play the role of master of ceremonies. Other celebrated artists have been engaged for the fascinating program of entertainment planned for the rededication. Having undergone a complete overhauling, the restaurant this season will offer Russian, French and American cuisine. Hi, de-Troika!

Thaf Spitalny Music.

Fearful lest the artistry and sound musicianship of Phil Spitalny and his orchestra had been overestimated on the occasion of the organization's debut at the Earle on Friday, this department attended another of their performances to corroborate its first impression or admit its utter fallacy. The first impression was strengthened rather than weakened.

It is a rare thing for a half-hour on any vaudeville program to afford so wide a variety of skillfully orchestrated selections as may be enjoyed during Maestro Spitalny's brief recital.

Where else could one hear a medley of Rudolf Friml melodies, ranging from "Allah's Holiday" to "The Song of the Flames," followed quickly by "Play, Fiddle, Play," beautifully arranged to display the melodious sweetness of the vibraphone, string choir, male octet and the superb soprano of Ethel Pastor, with a strikingly spectacular effect throwing a group of phosphorescent violins into picturesque relief, to merge almost immediately into the "Tiger Rag," with a trumpet and trombone treatment that is reminiscent of the Warings' "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean" number?

Symphonic Richness.

Then comes the overpowering rendition of Tschaikowski's "1812 Overture," with the full strength of all the Spitalny instruments and voices, plus the full strength of the house orchestra, under Freddie Clark, making a total ensemble of approximately 50. That, my masters, approaches a unit of true symphonic proportions.

And that isn't all!

In the "Tour of New York" novelty we hear in amazing modulations, blendings and divergent rhythms such a potpourri as "Sidewalks of New York," "The Bowery," "Eli Eli," "O Sole Mio" " 42nd Street," "Stormy Weather" and Miss Pastor's rousing Hungarian song.

Now, is that a feast of music, or is that a feast of music?

Washington's own "Apple Annie" is being made a "Lady for a Day," currently as an exploitation measure on behalf of the film of that name, opening soon at RKO-Keith's. Ensconced in a handsome suite at the Willard, gowned by the smartest shops and coiffed, manicured, breakfasted in bed and all the rest of it to a fare-thee-well, Apple Annie for 24 hours is tasting the nectar of the gods and walking on the clouds. In Washington, "Apple Annie" is an apple woman of only a week's standing and strictly for the purposes of this publicity project—ordinarily she is a newspaper vendor at the corner of Fifteenth and G streets. For a few days, beginning tomorrow, she will probably sell you your papers with a faraway look in her eyes—very faraway, indeed.

August Champions.

To keep the record complete, it should be set down that the motion picture box office champions for the month of August, as determined by the Motion Picture Herald's symposium of key city box-office reports, again coincided in large measure with Washington's appraisal of the same pictures, although they might have been listed in slightly different order.

Similarly, "Gold Diggers of 1933," the Warner musical, with Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Aline MacMahon, Warren William, Joan Blondell, Guy Kibbee and all the rest, and Radio's "Double Harness," costarring Ann Harding and William Howell, tied for third.

There were likewise two excellent films, but of totally different character, tied for fourth—"Mama Loves Papa," with Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles, and George Arliss' "Voltaire."

The score by producers, thus, is M-G-M, 1; Paramount, 2; Warners, 2; Universal, 2, and Radio 1—a slightly wider spread than has been the case frequently in the past.

So Jean Harlow has been sidekicking around with Joan Blondell, learning all about the manifold virtues of cameramen, eh? Well, well!

The metamorphosis of Apple Annie into Mrs. C. Worthington Manville, society dowager, comprises the most brilliant highlight of "Lady for a Day," the exceptionally diverting photoplay soon to be seen at RKO-Keith's as fourth attraction of RKO's "Greater Show Season." The artist here has caught a typical pose of May Robson, in the title role, following her miraculous transfiguration.

A worthy resurrection of this idyllic love story in the National Theater last night demonstrated once again that a play so firmly rooted in the fundamental emotions of the human heart need not rely upon the freshness in the public mind of the crimson horrors of war, for a vivid and poignant appeal to the more easily responsive of the surface sentiments.

"Seventh Heaven" was first presented eleven years ago next month in the Booth Theater in New York, with Helen Menken in the role of "Diane," which she revived with such signal success last evening. As one of the long list of lachrymose dramas inspired by the possibilities of the war as a convenient and timely background for romance, it profited, perhaps less than was believed at the time, by the vividness in the mass mind of the pathos, the terror and the heartache of the great struggle.

That this was not a necessary element of the play's success was emphasized by the enthusiasm of last night's audience, in whose minds the war has been dimmed and vastly softened by the passing of more than a decade of peace-time pursuits, not without a fair share of perplexities, but certainly without the constant vision of wholesale maiming, disfigurement and death.

Stripped of the glamour lent it by the wartime era, "Seventh Heaven" reveals itself as an imaginative, at times an argumentative and always a pseudo-philosophical drama of the struggle of society's lower strata.

With its introductory passages, in a particularly inept first act, set in a squalid cul-de-sac in a poverty-stricken district of Paris, Austin Strong has contrived to move his play very shortly to firmer ground than may be said to be afforded by the sewer traps made famous by Victor Hugo.

In the second and third act scenes in the attic home that has become "seventh heaven" to Chico, "a very remarkable fellow," who has just graduated from the sewers to the exalted post of street cleaner out in the sunshine of the upper world, and Diane, the abused and browbeaten ward of wealthy relatives dragged to gutter level by a drunken and profligate sister, the play takes on new life, new color and a new and vigorous thrust that will probably always catalogue it among the perennial favorites of romantic playgoers.

Miss Menken's Diane is a creature of cumulative interest, courage and emotional fire that guides the three acts skillfully through a crescendo of dramatic vigor and warmth. Her second act climax is something of a test of any actress' power—one which she meets with complete and commanding success. The final scene of the play—the reunion with her blinded Chico, now finally persuaded that there is, after all, a Bon Dieu presiding over the destiny of men—is shared with John Litel. Mr. Litel acquits himself with fine credit throughout by his excellent performance of the role of Chico.

Numerous others of last week's cast of "Design for Living" appear in this week's bill. Robert Ober and Burke Clarke are among the most congenially cast and the most successful in the execution of their appointed tasks. Edith Gresham, Freddie Sherman, Director Clifford Brooke, Karl Nielsen and Helen Dodge are among others who appear to advantage.

The settings are adequate in their expression of the squalor glorified by the shining love of two young hearts. While last evening's performance was not in every respect ideal, it was of sufficient merit to perpetuate the popularity of one of the most ingratiating romances that came out of the Great War.

"NRA GIRLS," Jimmie Lake presents an Empire burlesque company featuring Jerri McCauley, with Lucky Darling, Nora Murray, Joe Moss and Freddie Walker. Reviewed Monday afternoon.

NIRA's eagle may be blue, but the girls offered under its "auspices" by Jimmie Lake are far from being any shade of azure!

With Jerri McCauley headlined, the show builds up to her entrance, and she carries on—and off—much to the delight of the audience, even though she is quite bereft of even so much as Sally Rand's fans.

Buxom Jerri is, however, far from being the only pillar of burlesque pulchritude, for Alice du Val, Bee Baxter, Aileen Dale and a bevy of dancers add greatly to the solo and ensemble work. In ballet, Lucky Darling is especially effective.

The comedy skits are in the capable hands of Jack La Mont, Freddie Walker, Joe Moss, Harry Beasley and Lew White, who get many a laugh by no means ephemeral.

Road Work Will Bring Big Employment Rise

(Associated Press.)

The Bureau of Public Roads said yesterday its emergency program was due to bring about a heavy increase in employment during October.

Records show that although about 1,600 projects have been approved, actual construction has been started in the States on only about 300. Contracts have been awarded for 650. The 1,600 projects approved would furnish an estimated direct employment to 125,000 men.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THERE was a meeting of the WRC minds yesterday and after it was all over, Rachel Berhans Miller, Hagerstown, Md., emerged the new Manhattan Revue hostess, successor to Provensen Bride Hester Beall.

The minds had a hard time of it. No less than 50 girls were auditioned. But Miss Miller, it seems, was the closest approach to the Beall manner available.

The girls attended a Boston voice culture school together, which probably accounts for their similarity. Incidentally, Miss Miller is the girl who took over the Beall studio on Connecticut avenue.

From a later meeting of the minds yesterday came the announcement that Manhattan Revue would be heard on WMAL Wednesdays at 6:45 p. m., in addition to WRC broadcasts. This means two Bert Bagranoff and Marie Fowler shows.

Whitecaps Tonight.

Boswell Sisters, 7; Kate Smith, 7:45; Evalyn Hayes, 10:45—WJSV; Blackstone Plantation, 7; Ben Bernie, 8; Acting Navy Secretary Roosevelt, 9:30—WRC; Crime Club, 7; Rollickers, 7:45; Buenos Aires Radio Celebration, 8:30—WMAL.

Waves.

Permission from baseball's high priest, Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, is all that is needed for studios to begin putting finishing touches on world series broadcast plans.

Ted Husing and Les Quailey are certain to be the CBS announcers. The NBC play-by-play reporters also will come from New York. Both networks will use local facilities for Washington games. WOL yesterday asked to be excused.

A WMAL interview has been added to the publicity brew Hardie Meakin is stirring for RKO's schedule screening of "Lady for a Day."

Washington's schoolboy traffic police will microphone from WMAL at 7:45 Friday night an initial safety advice talk. A lad not yet named will explain the system in the first broadcast. Advice to school children, an appeal for their cooperation and advice to parents will be the next three. Then a little girl will finish by telling what she thinks of the whole business.

That Borden After Dinner Club, Wednesday night, is the next WJSV open-house program. Not even a ticket will be required to see it in the Willard at 9:30. Clubman Strickland Gilliland, Marguerite (Wilkins Coffee) Cromwell, Rudy Schramm, the Three Maids and Robert Trout will be there.

Last week's open-house man, Bandman Phil Spitalny, will radiocast again from the Willard at 7:30 Friday through WJSV.

You were right. Spitalny Tenor Nicolihi Cosentino does lisp. He told a pretty WJSV miss the other day he could "never forget thothe eyeth."

Columbia has completed arrangements for the Byrd-Antarctic broadcast. An engineer and an announcer will accompany the expedition, remain on the Southern icecap two years. Three transmitters will be taken along, a 1,000-watt crystal control radiotelephone installed on the ship, another 200-watt sender at the Byrd sub-base at the foot of the polar barrier, and a 100-watt short-wave portable. Buenos Aires will be pick-up point.

Washington rug cleaners, the C. A. Hinkel Co., signed for a 30-minute program on WRC yesterday. They will open with a concert orchestra Sunday night, October 1.

Ripples.

Arcade Sunshine goes from WRC today and Thursday at 7:30 this week, returning to the 8:45 spot next week . . . Farm Administrator George Peek and his wheat production control chief, M. L. Wilson, give the crop cut report for Columbia tomorrow and Sunday . . . Secretary Wallace will urge more crop cuts from an N. B. C. microphone next Sunday . . . and Deputy Farm Administrator Charles Brand goes into the processing tax on the same network tonight . . . the Beethoven "Moonlight Sonata" has been expressly arranged for Jessica Dragonette, Fred Hugsmith and the Cavaliers Friday . . . Columbia advises a former convict on the Voice of Experience period at 8:30 tonight . . . Roses and Drums begins the fall series on Columbia Sunday night . . . WJSV finally decided to cut Elder Michaux to two periods a week . . . Saturday nights and Sunday mornings . . . the elder never understood the control man's "go ahead" signal . . . he thought it another friendly greeting and waved back.

Singing strings singer is Sara Ann McCabe, above. She'll be heard tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, and again Friday at 10:30, over the NBC-WJZ network, WMAL in these parts. Tonight Connie Gates becomes one of the few one-woman shows in radio. She will accompany her own songs on a Columbia piano, starting at 11:15. The radiocasters have scheduled her for an encore Thursday at the same time.

Nats Bow to Browns, 4-2, as Gray Outhurls Burke; Still Need 2 Wins

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

THE end of the baseball trail and the end of those fat bi-monthly salary checks hold no terrors for that slim little, trim little fellow who was out there at Griffith Stadium yesterday warming up the pitchers in the St. Louis bullpen.

Muddy Ruel.

Herold Ruel, known to baseball as Muddy Ruel, who will find many supporters to testify that he was the greatest catcher ever to grace a Washington team, planned for his retirement from baseball 10 years ago when he earned a law degree at St. Louis.

Five years ago he became the first ball player-lawyer ever to be commissioned to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States. This week he was offered the post of assistant prosecutor of St. Louis County. He will make his decision at the end of the 1933 playing season.

Nats Remain Choice.

There comes to hand from Tom Kearney, the St. Louis betting commissioner, who will quote you odds on anything ranging from the possibility that the sun might rise in the west tomorrow to the possibility that Mussolini can beat Hitler in love sets; there comes to hand, as I was saying, the odds on the world series.

Mr. Kearney has not altered his convictions concerning the superiority of the Nats over the Giants, which, he explained to this department in St. Louis last month, forced him to install the Nats a 7-to-10 favorite to win the world series.

The betting men, like Kearney, who back their opinions with cash, have been won over to the Nats by the impressive balance of the Washington Club as contrasted with the fact that virtually pitching alone has carried the Giants to the top. They are not slow to forget the world series of 1931 when Paul Derringer, rookie sensation of the Cardinals, was soundly beaten in his two starts. And two of the Giants' chief reliances, Parmalee and Schumacher, are rookies.

No Choice in Opener.

Kearney makes no distinction between the Nats and the Giants in his odds on the first game, in which the two respective aces of the pitching staffs, Al Crowder and Carl Hubbell, are scheduled to work.

If you wish to get a bet down with Kearney on the first game of the series, he will ask you to lay 5 to 4, and take your choice of the teams. That is the bookmaker's percentage.

Kearney will give you odds of 2 to 1 that Washington will not win the first two games of the series, and he will give you the same odds that the Giants will not win the first two games.

Thus, he apparently is counting on Hubbell and Fitzsimmons as equal bets with Crowder and Whitehill in the first two games of the series, but thereafter expects the Nats to assert their superiority in the form of Stewart and Weaver, as contrasted to Parmalee and Schumacher in the remaining games.

About Jack Sharkey.

The end of the fistic trail is beckoning Jack Sharkey, whose decline reached a new low last night when he was beaten to a 10-round decision by the likes of King Levinsky, the more or less famed Chicago fish peddler.

Levinsky was not to be mentioned in the same inhalation with Sharkey at the height of the Boston Sailor's fistic success, but Sharkey's defeat last night was no stunning upset. As early as his second fight with Max Schmeling, when he inherited the title on a decision that savored of the fish docks, it was apparent that Sharkey was slipping—fast.

When Sharkey was knocked out by Primo Carnera in the eighth round in which he surrendered his title, that was only additional evidence that Sharkey was getting no better, fast.

Earl Clark Fined With Albany Club

Durham, N. C., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The Albany Club, of the International League, was fined $500 and Outfielder Earl Clark $200 by President W. G. Bramham of the National Association today for violation of salary affidavit.

Investigation showed a side agreement between President Joseph Cambria of the Albany club and Clark to pay Clark money outside of the amount of the contract.

The affidavit was signed by Manager Bill McCorry for the club, and under these conditions Cambria was not suspended for two years, as he actually did not sign the affidavit.

Earl Clark, a former star of the Washington sandlots and playground sprinting record holder, was released this season after several years with the Braves.

Coach Anderson Gathers Unto Him His Flock of Notre Dame Gridmen

Yanks Divide; Allen Grants Two Hits

Win First, 6-1, Then Lose to Chisox Rookie, 4-3; Gehrig Slams Pair.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—The two-hit pitching of Johnny Allen and the seven-hit hurling of Leslie Tietje, a Texas League recruit from Dallas, gave New York and Chicago an even break in today's double-header, the Yankees winning the first game, 6 to 1, and the White Sox the second, 4 to 3.

While Allen was holding the Sox to two safe blows, the Yankees, led by Lou Gehrig and Dixie Walker, collected ten hits off Paul Gregory. Gehrig hit his twenty-eighth home run in the sixth, while Walker connected with a homer and a triple.

Russell Is Renamed District A. A. U. Head

William E. Russell, of the Boys Club, active in athletic circles here for a number of years, last night was reelected president of the District of Columbia A. A. U. at its annual meeting.

Russell's name was presented by the nominating committee, composed of A. Earle Weeks, Norman Landreau, Dr. O. U. Singer, Joseph Aronoff and Dorsey Griffith.

Columbus Trounces Minneapolis, 7 to 5

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 18 (AP).—Slugging vigorously, Columbus got five homers, a triple and seven doubles to defeat Minneapolis, 7 to 5, in ten innings today to gain a 3-to-2 margin in the American Association play-off series.

The attendance was 6,000. The sixth game will be played here Tuesday.

Nats Could Clinch League Flag Today

Washington tonight may be celebrating the annexation of its third American League pennant.

The pennant will belong to the Nats late this afternoon, if they defeat the Browns here and the Yankees lose to the White Sox in New York.

In that event, the Yankees, by winning all of their remaining games, which total 10, could not overhaul the Nats, even if Washington lost all of its remaining eight games.

The Giants moved a step nearer the National League pennant when their closest rivals, the Pirates, lost to the Phillies. Only one victory is needed by the Giants to clinch the flag.

Dixies Series Is Slated To Start Wednesday

Dallas, Sept. 18 (AP).—Officials of the Texas League and Southern Association and the pennant-winning clubs decided today the first three games of the 1933 Dixie series between San Antonio and New Orleans would be played at San Antonio, beginning next Wednesday night.

Irving Stopped By Burns in 6 Rounds

K. O. BURNS, the bronzed redhead from Baltimore, won by a technical knockout over Henry Irving, Washington light-heavyweight, in the first indoor show of the season in Elks Hall, Alexandria, last night. The end came when Referee Goldie Ahearn refused to let the battle continue into the seventh round.

A terrific right split Irving's left eye in the fifth round and he absorbed further punishment on the injured member in the sixth. When the flow of blood could not be stopped between rounds, Referee Ahearn declared Burns the winner before the gong rang for the seventh.

Burns flew out of his corner in the opening stanza and dropped the local bruiser for a count of eight, another for nine. Irving came back in the next chapter and had Burns on the floor for a count of three when the bell rang.

In the semifinal, Hugh Gray, Oklahoma, and Phil Furr, Camp Meade welter, mauled about the resin in uninteresting fashion for a sleepy draw. The Army boxer had a strong, long left, but was poor at the infighting.

In the opening four, Joe Green slugged and stampeded to a win over Feeby Shumaker. Pete Beven, Washington, and Charley Thompson, Baltimore, drew in what looked to be a rank decision. The Baltimore lad led throughout the six-round affray.

Koshover Wins Easy Decision Over Davis

RODDY DAVIS, hitherto an unknown ring quantity, was tested and stamped with the seal of public approval in the main bout at Fort Washington last night. The public approval came not as a result of a win, but because of the glimpses of future greatness he displayed to some 500 fans while being badly beaten by Maxie Koshover.

From the opening bell of their eight-round bout, Koshover left little doubt in the minds of the spectators as to the ultimate outcome of the fight. He clearly outclassed the erstwhile Northeast schoolboy in every department of the game.

Reels Toward Corner.

In the sixth round, Davis landed his first really clean blow of the fight. Apparently enraged, Koshover became a veritable whirlwind that swept his opponent to the ropes. Davis was out on his feet at the bell, and reeled drunkenly back towards his corner.

The last two rounds saw Davis staggered time and time again. But Koshover was unable to land that final knockout punch.

Carey Wright and Pepper Young stumbled through eight dreary rounds to a draw in the semifinal. Bob Lowry eked out a decision over Soldier Clarke in a six-round main prelim. In the four rounders, Doug Swetman decisioned Soldier Shasburger and Lou Jameson outpointed Soldier Larkin.

Injury to Fitzsimmons, Giants, Undetermined

St. Louis, Sept. 18 (AP).—Fred Fitzsimmons, veteran right-hander of the New York Giants' pitching staff, will submit to an X-ray examination tomorrow to determine definitely the extent of an injury he suffered when hit in the neck by a batted ball in today's game with the Cardinals.

Fitzsimmons was struck by a hard line drive from the bat of Bob O'Farrell in the second inning. He threw up his hands, partly checking the drive, but it knocked him down. He left the game.

Levinsky Gets Verdict Over Sharkey

Levinsky, to the acclaim of 20,317 spectators was awarded a unanimous decision over the former world's heavyweight champion in their blistering 10-round battle fought in Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox. The verdict of the two judges and Referee "Little Phil" Collins gave Levinsky a wide margin. The Boston Tar was credited with winning only one round.

Sharkey, opening a campaign which he hoped would culminate in his regaining the heavyweight championship he lost to Primo Carnera three months ago, came dangerously near being knocked out in the first two rounds. Levinsky, after rocking Sharkey with the first right-hand punch he landed, followed up his advantage with another right-hand blast, that knocked the Tar flat on his back.

Sharkey Arises, Dazed.

Sharkey got up at the count of seven bewildered and dazed, but managed to last out the round. Levinsky, with a little more alertness, might have finished him, but when Sharkey was swaying Levinsky failed to charge in.

In the second round Sharkey was forced to weather another heavy storm. A heavy right-hand blast to the jaw had him teetering on his toes, but ring experience and generalship enabled the former sailor to dance around until he got his bearings.

Sharkey, regarded as a master heavyweight boxer and figured in the betting to outpoint Levinsky, set out instead to outslug the rough-and-tough youngster from Chicago's Ghetto, and this brought about his downfall. Levinsky piled into him with a charge of dynamite lurking in right-hand swings. In some spots of the battle the lumbering Levinsky put on speed and actually outboxed the former champion.

Outmauls Sharkey.

While Levinsky mauled and outslugged Sharkey all through the fight, the exciting first two rounds practically saw the finish of Sharkey's comeback campaign.

Levinsky, outweighing the ex-champion by 4½ pounds, started out to carry the fight to him and succeeded in doing it. He charged into Sharkey repeatedly, forcing him to retreat to the ropes with the Kingfish connecting with some of his dealiest punches.

In the fifth round Sharkey landed a low left hook into foul territory, and the enraged Kingfish deliberately retaliated with a low left hook to even the score.

Sharkey had demanded and received a guarantee of $25,000 to trade punches with Levinsky. The battle drew gross receipts of $52,996.40 with a paid attendance of 20,317. Levinsky probably will receive $8,000 for conquering the former world champion.

Cards Defeat Giants, 4-3, By Rally

Hubbell Takes Mound in 5th, but Fails to Hold Team's 3-1 Lead.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18 (AP).—Seeking the victory that would clinch the National League pennant, the New York Giants today fell before the pitching and hitting of Tex Carleton as the St. Louis Cardinals won the second game of the series, 4 to 3.

With the Giants leading, 3 to 1, as the result of an early attack off Carleton, Manager Bill Terry called on Carl Hubbell to protect the advantage when Herman Bell started to falter in the fifth inning. The southpaw failed, however, and the Pirates by splitting even in a double-header with the Phillies retained a mathematical chance of winning the flag.

Hubbell, usually especially effective against the Cards, was pounded for seven hits and three runs in 3 2-3 innings. The climax came in the eighth, when with Leo Durocher on third as the result of a triple, Carleton crashed through with a single, scoring what proved to be the winning run.

Band Will Welcome Giants Upon Return

St. Louis, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—A special train will carry the New York Giants back to New York after tomorrow's concluding game with the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Giants, who hope to be National League champion's after tomorrow's play, will be welcomed in Grand Central Station late Wednesday afternon by a band and a group of New York fans.

Hadley Halts Foe's Rally In Ninth

Boken, Pinch-Hitting for Bluege, Drives Into Double Play.

St. Louis Overcomes 2-1 Lead, Winning on Triple in 8th.

HONEST SAM GRAY, who wrung a confession out of himself and admitted being party to a sore arm that invalidated his sale to the Nats a few weeks back, was in high good health yesterday at Griffith Stadium and the man the Nats wouldn't have checked their rush toward the pennant.

Ancient Sam who, with his open-faced honesty, talked himself out of a share of the world series coin, yesterday made Clark Griffith rue the cancellation of the deal when he pitched the down-at-the-heel St. Louis Browns to a 4-2 victory over the Nats.

Still Need Two Victories.

Victory yesterday would have put the Nats within one victory of a chance to clinch the pennant as a result of the Yankees' division of a double-header with the White Sox, but with Gray out there pitching nine-hit ball, the Nats are still two victories away from the flag.

Irving Hadley appeared on the scene in the ninth to help Gray out with the ball game after Kuhel had opened the inning with a lucky single, and Hadley weathered the ninth-inning storm that has become a habit with the Nats who got the tying runs on bases again, but couldn't get them around to the plate.

Gullic Gets Triple.

It was no bad ball game that Bobby Burke pitched either, for the stop-gap of the Nats' pitching staff held the Browns to seven hits, but he pitched a three-base hit to Ted Gullic in the eighth inning that lost him the ball game.

Five thousand women, who left the clothes on the line, were among the 6,500 spectators at the ball game who saw the Nats go into the ninth trailing, 4-2, and sat back confidently for the ninth-inning doings that have been an added attraction of the ball yard of late.

Hadley Is Sent In.

When Joe Kuhel dropped a looping single into the sun in left field to start the inning off, the stage apparently was being made ready, but Manager Hornsby withdrew Gray at this point and substituted his ace, Hadley. Pinch-Hitter Sam Rice was out on a fly to right, but the perennial hero in such a setting, Cliff Bolton, came out to pinch hit for Bluege and delivered a slashing single to center that put the tying run on base.

In came Boken to pinch hit for Burke. He swung on the ball and the game was over. Scharein stuck up one gloved hand, speared the liner as it headed into left field, threw to second to double Kuhel who had left the base, and there was no more.

Off to Early Lead.

Joe Cronin had put the Browns in the way of making a run when he muffed Scharein's grounder in the first inning and they took a 1 to 0 lead with the help of a walk to Reynolds and Campbell's single.

After Heinie Manush had tripled in the first inning and perished on third, the Nats evened the score in the second when Dave Harris singled and eventually scored on Moe Berg's infield out. Buddy Myer singled to open the third and the Nats had a 2 to 1 lead when he scored with the help of a walk, a wild pitch and Manush's single. Scharein started a fast double play off Harris to avert further damage at this point.

The game wended its weary way into the eighth and the Browns had only four hits off Burke until Campbell doubled to center. Melillo walked and then Gullic, the reformed outfielder at third base, bashed the ball against the railing atop the left-field stands and it fell back into the field for three bases. Melillo and Gullic scored with the runs that represented the ball game.

Bulk of Fans See Nats Winning Over Giants In First Game, Post Contest Entries Reveal

EITHER out of a sense of genuine civic loyalty or after a fair appraisal of both teams, participants in The Post's world series contest are leaning heavily toward the Nats in the prediction of the outcome of the first game with the Giants in New York October 3.

The great bulk of the pre-game versions of the fans, on which The Post will base its award of tickets to all games of the series in Washington, are favoring the Nats to beat the Giants by a close but small score in the opening game of the series.

The correct final score counts heavily in the final judging of the contest winners, and the hundreds of fans who have already submitted their selections to The Post Baseball Contest Editor are banking generally on a victory for Washington.

Dark Hope Captures Feature as Havre de Grace Track Opens Fall Race Meet

Silent Shot Beaten by Length

6,000 Crowd Turns Out For Charity Benefit Netting $10,000.

Winner Rewards With $12.80 Mutuel; One Chance Is Third.

By Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Sept. 18.—Battered by a barrage of long shots, horse racing returned to Maryland under the big-time fall setting today. Some 6,000 fans gathered here under bright afternoon skies and left as the sun was sinking, convinced that the favorites do not always conform to the NRA. In fact, the public choices did their part in only two instances. Customers who were late missed Rose Bearer in the first and those who left early missed Flaming Mamie in the final.

The topsy-turvy racing extended right into the Fort Henry, the contest that featured the first of the charity programs. Many a dollar, carefully guarded while awaiting this meeting, was piled in the windows on the W. R. Coe enty, which went to the post at 7 to 10.

Dark Hope Is Winner.

The crowd should have sensed the hunch that the name Dark Hope presented after what had gone before. Such was not the case, however. This gelding romped home, chased by Silent Shot and One Chance. The Coe color bearers, Pomposity and Black Queen, were fourth and last in the field of seven.

Dark Hope, under a snug ride by Earl Steffen, laid behind the fast pace of Bright Bird until the half-miler slowed and then went on to win, with Steffen choosing a length as his margin of victory.

Charity will receive approximately $10,000 from the day, officials estimated.

Rose Bearer in Romp.

Favorite players, the Foxcatcher Farms, Jockey Johnny Gilbert and Trainer Preston Burch got off to a flying start in the first race. Chief credit, of course, goes to the little Messenger colt, Rose Bearer. He shook off the determine efforts of In Clover, of the Labrot entry, and won as his rider pleased. In Clover managed to hold on for the second money while Royal Ruler was third. The winning margin was six lengths.

Those who prefer their prices long had their innings in the second when Pretty Wise, a son of Wise Counsellor, scored a length victory, over Prince Abbott, another long one. Third and fourth came All Rowes and The Gen, loaded with coin. Pretty Wise rewarded at the rate of $24.60 for the usual deuce and Prince Abbot paid the same mutuel to place. Tipton rode Pretty Wise and it was the colt's first victory of the year.

Beats Can't Remember.

Dreel, coupled with Aske as the Stryker-Campbell entry, circled the leaders at the stretch turn to win the third race, beating, among others, Can't Remember, the paddock tip, which was second. The show end of the purse went to the heavily played Prince Pompey. Mad Eagle and Toytime both contested Can't Remember for the lead, but it was not until Dreel moved up that the Canter colt threw up the sponge. Drell was lukewarm with the betters and paid $8.20.

The public tossed in loads of dollars on Pencader in the hands of the Washington combination of Jockey Jimmy Sullivan and Trainer Preston Burch, and then stayed to see the son of Chilhowee run last in the five-horse race. The winner turned up in Brass Monkey, which put up a stretch run that was too much for Even Up and Vote. The last named got the best of the break and made a battle of it until the last sixteenth.

Chief's Troubador, under expert handling of Henry Cruz, Capital boy, won the sixth in a blanket finish with Barry and Lone Hand. Barry was the favorite.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Sam Houston, hero of the Texan struggle for independence, was by birth and tradition a citizen of the United States, but in his long and active career he found time, and reason, to join three other nations. In 1829 he left his home and resigned his office as Governor of Tennnessee to go and live among the Cherokees in Arkansas. He was formally adopted by them as a member of their nation.

His third citizenship came in 1832 when he settled in Texas—then under the Mexican flag—and became a delegate to the convention which framed the proposed constitution for Texas as a State in the Mexican republic. When this failed, and a war for Texan independence from Mexico broke out, Houston became a leader of the movement, the success of which resulted in the new Republic of Texas. He was later its president and first citizen.

Returning then to American citizenship when Texas was made part of the United States, Houston served as governor and also senator of that State. In his earlier days he had served as governor and representative in Tennessee.

Strange as it seems, Houston was deposed as Governor of Texas because, in 1861, he refused to accept citizenship in yet another nation—the Confederacy.

Sonny Workman sat on the typewriter bench in the press box yesterday and told friends that Equipoise didn't relish the two-mile race at Belmont last Saturday. "When I found out he wasn't going to be close after a mile and a half, I eased up on him," said the Whitney rider. Don Meade, Bradley's contract rider, was the authority for the statement that Broker's Tip, 1933 Derby winner, will be racing at Laurel. The 3-year-old is working well, he says. Rush Hour, Labrot star, went lame yesterday morning after a workout. The great Bennings went lame from the first race until the seventh, where he pulled home his first winner of the day at a shade better than even money. But then, there's tomorrow. BILL.

First Race—Red Badge barely missed graduating at Empire early in the summer. Comes from a speed line and gets the call over Royal Ruler. This one put up a good race yesterday and would be dangerous if sent back. Leonie, of the Labrot stable, scratched yesterday and could be in the money here.

Second Race—Wise Ways exhibited fine speed in Chicago and he finds little opposition in this field. Reported to be fit despite his few track appearances. Looks like Par Value and Decorate will be the ones to make it close.

Third Race—Topple is another Westerner that draws Bennings support. Shipped here after running consistently at Hawthorne. Said to be ready. Escadron is the one to beat on New York form. Tody West seems best of the half-milers in the test.

Fourth Race—Cathop looks like the favorite and the winner at this moment. Gets in with only a steadying impost and comes off a race that saw some of the Midwest stars trailing him. Wise Count has been primed for a sprint. Action for the show.

Fifth Race—Surety has been out of the money only once since breaking his maiden at Arlington. Certainly rates top choice among this gang. Gadaround had to be nursed along to win one on the half-milers. Said to be in excellent shape. Shavings might wake up.

Sixth Race—Backgammon is fit but not the classy animal of a couple of seasons ago. Figures to take care of these, however. Bright Bird was working out yesterday when Meade took the lead and held it to the far turn. Might come back today and be second. Fort Dearborn may be the sleeper.

Seventh Race—Aegis is the class of these and will have Tipton in the saddle. Jambalaya for the place and Soeur Blanche to show.

Hagerty Is Optimistic Over G. U. Team Despite Lack of Veterans

Jim Carrone Leaves for Fordham

Counted On as Regular; G. W. Squad Is Cut to 36 Players.

JACK HAGERTY is banking on his own strategy and a winning spirit, which is much in evidence, to give Georgetown University a winning football team. Working like a Trojan in the face of almost insurmountable odds, Hagerty believes that from the 30 men on the roster he can fashion an eleven possessing some of the dash, the power and the color that Hoya teams of his days sported.

Hagerty is not putting himself up as another Knute Rockne, but from his store of grid knowledge, gained in both college and professional ranks, he feels that he can teach his charges tricks that will help offset their disadvantage in inexperience.

Today Georgetown and Maryland will scrimmage at the Hilltop. It is necessary to have intercollegiate sessions because of the small squads at the two institutions. By next week the frosh will be far enough advanced to square off with the Hoya varsity.

The varsity roster was reduced by one yesterday when it was announced that Jim Carrone had transferred to Fordham. Carrone's work in practice indicated a brilliant future, and Hagerty was counting on him to fill a regular berth in the back field.

To Shift Williamson.

Sorely pressed for suitable material to fill gaping holes in the line, Hagerty plans to shift Jack Williamson, a center, to tackle. Ed Callahan will step in at center. This Callahan is a hefty lad who boots the ball as well as he passes from center. With no grade A kicker in view, Hagerty has decided to pull him out of the line for the punting. Callahan gets off long, spinning spirals, and with his left foot.

Joy Lynch, up from the '32 Freshmen squad, is the outstanding candidate for the other tackle. Bill Downer, a 220-pounder, looks promising, but he needs more experience. Paul Kennedy, short and stocky, probably will direct the team in action. He fits in nicely at quarterback, but like a majority of the boys, is untried under fire.

Pixlee Prunes Squad.

Coach Pixlee wielded the pruning knife at George Washington yesterday. Thirty-six players remained after the slash, 12 being cut adrift. Pixlee now has 13 backs, seven tackles, seven ends, five guards, and four centers. The back field squad is the largest and most capable the Colonials have carried.

Johnny Lee, assistant line coach, may be forced to abandon football in favor of his teaching duties. He dispenses knowledge in Pharmaceutical Chemistry.

Five C. U. Men Hurt.

Capt. John Jankowski, the larrupin' right half, has a wrenched back plastered up with adhesive; Bill Conter, guard, is nursing a bruised shoulder; Ed White, center, has a "charley horse," while Red Fleming, end, is out for a few days with an injured leg. Finally, Abe Rosenfield, dependable guard, popped up with an infected foot.

Although the Redbirds open their schedule week after next with Marty Brill's La Salle eleven, Bergman and his mates are pointing to the Holy Cross game the following week. With a win over this potent Eastern Club, the Cardinals will have placed the first feather in their cap for a successful season.

O'Brien, G. U. Golfer, Shoots 206-Yard Ace

Don O'Brien, of Georgetown University, Maryland State junior golf champion, scored a hole-in-one on the 206-yard seventeenth at Indian Spring yesterday. O'Brien used a No. 2 iron. The ball landed a few feet from the cup, and dribbled in.

Golf Kids Its Victims Along, Says Pegler, Self-Confessed Flop at Game He Calls Vice

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The most fascinating trait of this goofy obsession called golf which occupies so much expensive acreage and consumes so many man-hours and so much money and emotional power is its bland pretense that suckers can play it.

This is something which is not true of any other game that I am familiar with. If a man can't swim more than twice his own length and gets the heebies when he looks down from high places he recognizes at once that he is not cut out for water-polo or fancy diving and contents himself with strutting his figure on the sand and an occasional daring splash off the float.

If he can't sit a horse he doesn't attempt to play polo and unless he has very good reason to regard himself as a fair sort of ball player he doesn't touch a baseball after he has passed the age of 21.

Have No Illusions.

All the other athletic pursuits have their natural deterrents. The legs aren't quit up to tennis, so if the victim plays the game at all he plays it just for exercise and without illusions or ambitions. Or he doesn't box because it takes too much wind and entails a risk to his teeth, nose and eyes.

But the novice golfer, being entirely innocent and natural, usually contrives to hit two or three satisfactory smacks or sink some long chip shots or putts on his first attempt, and from that time on he is, in his own mind, as good as the best of them in spots. Golf is a game in which people just walk slowly around a 5-mile staggered route with a pause every now and again to wave a small and facile bludgeon at a small and frisky missile.

The physical strain is not negligible, as some people think, but it is subtle and gradual, and I will not be told that there breathes a soul so dead as never to himself has said, some time on a golf course, "There was a shot that Bobby Jones couldn't have hit any better."

Self-Confessed Victim.

I have been a victim of this vice myself, and I do believe that if I could remember and then could assemble into a consecutive round of 18 holes all the best shots that I have ever hit, that collected round would equal the best single round that the best golfer on earth has ever played.

I have sunk a chip shot from 50 yards, which, if it had occurred in a national championship and a Hagen or a Dutra had hit it with 10,000 people looking on, to win a match and a title, would have lived in the memory of all present as one of the greatest strokes ever delivered in sport.

I think my friends in the press tent might have written something about the red badge of courage in connection with some of the shots which I have made. I have sunk a putt of 25 yards, which would have set the customers to jabbering and tearing their clothes if it had occurred in just the proper dramatic circumstances in a great tournament. But in doing so I have come up with a count of from 8 to 13 for that particular hole and the putt has been just an exasperated slap at a ball, which had come to represent all the things that I resented on this earth.

Now and again I have even hit, by accident, I am quick to say before you do, some very beautiful tee shots and brassies and some magnificent recoveries from weeds and rocks and the deep-tangled wildwood. My friend, John Farrell, if he lives a thousand years and improves with all the years, can never hit better blows than some I have performed.

If You Doubt It—

And if you challenge this, then I know he never will make a better score on a certain par three hole than one which was somehow made by a lady of my acquaintance, of rising 60 years, who waggled a blade on the tee and somehow tagged her golf ball on just the correct nerve center to drop it on the green and trickle it straight into the hole for an ace.

You can not do better than an ace on any hole of golf. Nobody can. But did any lady of rising 60 years ever hit a home run in a major league ball game or win a tennis match, or did any man of equal years ever win a fighting championship or a marathon or score the winning touchdown for Notre Dame?

One time at a National championship I saw Bill Mehlhorn take nine strokes on a hole of golf which I had played the day before in five and I have other beautiful memories of holes which I have played in fewer strokes than some of the great experts required in certain moments, but I don't believe I ever could have pitched any such ball games or single innings as Carl Hubbell has pitched this year and I have never seen Bill Terry look bad on any play as compared to anything which I might have done on the same ball.

Resents Golf.

Nor do I ever cherish an idea that I would have popped Tony Canzoneri in the center as hard as Barney Ross did many times in their fight last week and make his tongue pop out. The hardest punch I ever could hit wouldn't have opened Tony Canzoneri's mouth except perhaps in derision.

That is why I resent this golf. It kids the victim along. It makes him think until his dying day that there is hope for him when the evil gods of a treacherous game have decided long ago that he is hopeless.

Golf Title Play Entries Close Tonight

ENTRIES for the District golf championship — the crowning event on the District association calendar—will close tonight at 6 p. m.

The tournament is scheduled over the 72-hole route at the Indian Spring Country Club Thursday and Friday.

With Harry Pitt, of Manor, former champion, not expected to compete, and a number of other big guns already having indicated they will not be entrants, the tournament promises to develop into a one-man show.

Burrows Shoots 74 In Anacostia Trials

Bradley Burrows, well-known District municipal golf star, shot a 39-35—74 in yesterday's resumption of play in the qualifying rounds of the Anacostia Open tournament, but his score was 7 shots above the par-cracking 67 turned in by Tom Doerer last week.

Claude Rippy, "Uptown" champion, had a 76.

Hildebrand Gives Red Sox Two Hits

Indian Hurler Shuts Out Foe in Opener, 9-0.

Boston, Sept. 18 (AP).—Cleveland had little trouble taking a series opener from the Red Sox, 9 to 0, today as Oral Hildebrand limited the Sox to two scratch hits.

Variety for All On Mat Card Thursday

LIKE lunchroom hash, Thursday night's rasslefest at Griffith Stadium offers a little bit of everything. Starting with the co-features and following right down through the preliminaries, enough different types of grunt-and-groan men will perform to suit the craving of every appetite of the addicts who pay their way into the stands.

Those who like cave-man stuff will get it in one of the headliners, which pits George ("Hotcha") Zaharias against Jim McMillan, the reformed football player. Between George's punching and kneeing and Jim's flying tackles there should be enough action to suit the most bloodthirsty.

A liittle comedy is promised in the other feature as Sol Slagel, who meets Gino Garibaldi, makes even his opponents laugh when he gently eases out of usually painful holds because of his double-jointedness or contortionistic faculties. He pits them against the roughness and ruggedness.

Zaharias and Garibaldi, by the way, are clamoring for another chance at each other and their showing Thursday will go a long way toward bringing this about.

As for the supporting acts, Cliff (Swede) Olsen and Paul Boesch promise speed and pep, Dr. Karl Sarpolis features a flying scissors as he takes on Herbie Freeman, while the Wladek Zbyszko-Milo Steinborn tilt will be largely a test of science and strength.

Bookbinders Bow, 4-3, To Rallies of A. G. O.

Hitting their stride in the last two innings of a six inning fray, A. G. O. rallied to defeat the Bookbinders, 4-3, yesterday, in the first game of the Federal League championship series.

Art Dumford, Bookbinders hurler, held his opponents scoreless until the fifth when Ames singled to rightfield, scoring the tying run. Another uprising, featured by the stickwork of Fiscus, and Forbes, decided the issue.

The victors will meet Civil Service today.

Increase of 707 Pupils Shown; 77,021 Begin

Public Schools Puzzled By Eastern Area Movement.

Enrollment dropped at Central and McKinley High Schools and increased at Eastern and Roosevelt, as public schools opened here yesterday with a total registration of 77,021 pupils, 707 more than were enrolled on the opening day last year.

He calculates the enrollment today will increase to 80,000 and the maximum this year will be 84,000.

Eastern Movement Puzzling.

Enrollment at Central was 2,358, a decrease of 228 from the opening day in 1932. At Eastern there was an increase of 522, bringing the total to 2,870.

School officials were puzzled by this movement of pupils toward the Eastern section of the city. Assistant Superintendent Stephen E. Kramer said it might not mean anything, but added the next few days would prove whether the population was decreasing in the central section and increasing in the Western.

An increased enrollment of 176 at Roosevelt, giving a total of 1,579, is explained by the fact this is the newest high school in the Capital and accommodates a fast-growing community in the far Northwestern section.

64 Increase at Western.

Western, probably the most-sought high school in Washington, had an increase of only 64 pupils and a total of 1,564. The low increase is due to restrictions on entrance to Western through setting up of residential boundaries.

Both Eastern and Western are on a stagger schedule. Classes run from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. Classes gradually are emptied from the lunch periods and in the early afternoon, when morning pupils are dismissed. The afternoon influx is accommodated in this way.

Enrollment at the two teachers colleges was 850, a slight decrease from last year. At Wilson, in the white division, the enrollment was 500, and at Miner, 350.

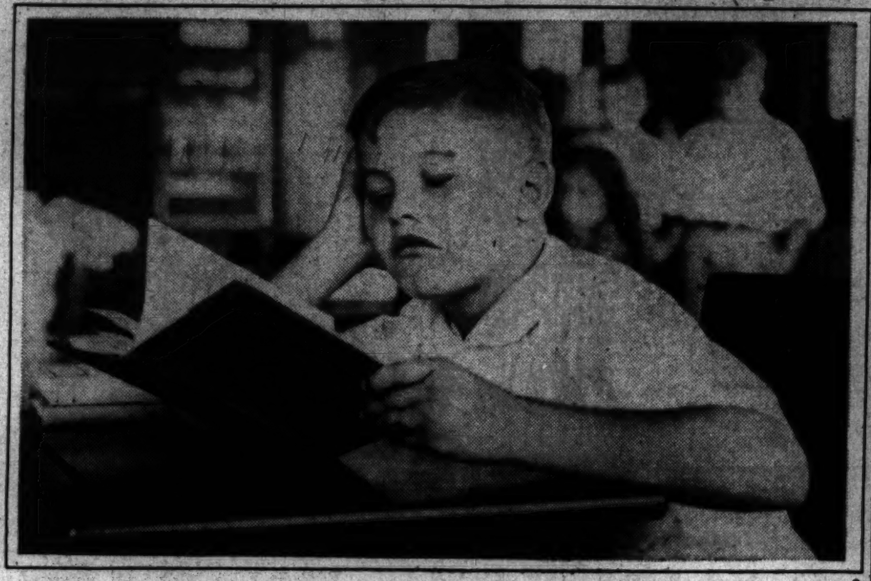
5,249 in Night Schools.

Night schools opened with a total enrollment of 5,249. Registration in the six white schools was 3,221, and in the seven colored, 2,028.

Decrease of about 800 was shown in the white schools and 200 in the colored. E. J. Lockwood, director of white evening schools, laid the decrease to the fact that it was not generally understood night schools were to open yesterday.

McKinley had an enrollment of 1,073; Hine, 326; Central, 526; Roosevelt, 934; Abbott, 55, and Webster, 207. Registration will continue tonight.

Scenes, Gloomy and Otherwise, Mark Opening Day in Washington Schools



Post Staff Photos.

"Aw, shucks," muttered Russell Wise, the young man in the left upper picture, as he took his seat in the third grade at Wheatley School yesterday, and opened a book for the first time in three months, "why do you have to go to school anyway?" Dorothy Bridges, in the other picture, took a more philosophic view. To prove she was willing to make the best of it, she brought a big red apple to Miss E. E. Horvath, third grade teacher at Wheatley.

Church Gets New Minister

Dr. Blackwelder, Baltimore, to Assume Lutheran Pastorate, Oct. 15.

Dr. O. F. Blackwelder, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, Baltimore, will become pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, Second and B streets southeast, October 15, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Blackwelder succeeds Dr. John Weidley, for 27 years pastor of the church, who resigned because of ill health.

For eight years Dr. Blackwelder has occupied the pulpit of the Baltimore church. For seven years he has been on the executive committee of the Baltimore Federation of Churches and for the last year served as president of the Interdenominational City-wide Ministers Association and president of the Lutheran Ministers Association.

The Church of the Reformation recently was sold to the Government. Parishioners plan a new church on the north side of East Capitol street between Second and third streets.

Approval Seen For Traction Merger Plan

Utilities Commission to Give Decision Thursday.

The Public Utilities Commission will give its decision on the proposed traction merger plan Thursday. Approval is expected, as no serious objections were made at the public hearing yesterday.

Objections at the hearing came from William McK. Clayton, representing the Federation of Citizens' Association, and Joseph W. Cheney, who said he had been a street car rider since 1875.

Clayton objected that the Capital Transit Co.—the new company into which the Capital Traction and Washington Railway & Electric Cos. are to be merged—would have its stock issued at par value of $100 per share.

The plan includes a contract by which the Capital Transit Co. is to pay the Potomac Electric Power Co. $445,000 per year for 75,000,000 kilowatt hours of power.

The anticipated action of the commission would clear the way to effect the merger soon. Final approval rests with the stockholders of the two firms. They will meet separately on September 26 to vote.

Registrations for the first five days in the U. S. Reemployment Committee office in Rockville, Md., totaled 225, according to George W. Davis, manager. The office opened September 11.

Employers are urged to call the office at the Rockville courthouse for qualified workers. Included in the registrations were automobile mechanics, bricklayers, carpenters, clerks, stenographers, draftsmen, laborers, farm and general gardeners, male nurses, painters, housemaids and cooks, plasterers, plumbers, truck drivers, electrical engineers, construction superintendents and printers.

Elections will be held tonight, general forecast being reelection of present officers. George Wallace Edwards, Asbury Park, N. J., is ruler, and Joseph T. Newman, Asbury Park, is grand secretary. The woman's auxiliary, holding sessions in Walker Memorial Church, is headed by Mrs. Bessie J. Waddell, of Boston.

Honeymoon

Policeman Spots Auto as One Long Sought; Husband Held.

The eagle eye of Private J. O. Curtis, Traffic Bureau policeman, spoiled a honeymoon yesterday. Curtis remembers license numbers so well Charles Davis, bridegroom for a day, is under arrest.

Curtis, on his way home from work yesterday morning, spied an automobile for which there was a lookout. He stopped the machine, took Davis in custody and, according to park police, solved a series of Potomac Park thefts.

The suspect, who gave 1538 Sixth street northwest as his address, is being held for investigation in connection with a number of petty thefts committed over the last two months. Davis was married Sunday night.

Dual Fare Rate For City Urged

People's Counsel Keech Favors 5-Cent Charge for Short Rides.

Advocating a dual rate structure to provide for short and long hauls, Richmond Keech, people's counsel before the Public Utility Commission, sanctioned the proposed merger of Washington street car companies last night.

Speaking before the Brookland Citizens Association at the Masonic Hall, Mr. Keech defended the merger on the grounds of economy and efficiency.

"By eliminating duplication of personnel and equipment, the saving would amount to $1,000,000 a year," he said. "The charge should be commensurate with the service. Fare should be 5 cents for downtown sections and 10 cents for longer hauls."

Preliminary arrangements for the merger include provisions for universal transfers and retention of the 3-cent fare for school children. The proposed double fare was included, Mr. Keech said, because "Washington is too big for a flat 5-cent fare."

"Comfort, another important factor in satisfactory street car transmission, would be insured by the improved equipment made available from the savings through elimination of duplication," Mr. Keech concluded.

Long Pants for Police To Shorten Park Costs

Long pants for short expense accounts. This is the latest experiment tried by the United States Park Police.

It was learned yesterday recommendations have been made to deprive the department's officers of their breeches and puttees and replace them with long trousers. The change would save some money, it was explained, because leather puttees are too expensive.

Six More Mated Workers Lose Federal Posts

The Adjutant General's Office last night launched a vigorous defense of dismissal of married workers, following with announcement that 17 additional employes eligible for retirement have been separated from the service.

Of the 17 retired under the 30-year law, six are married and have mates in the Government. Yesterday's action brought the total separated from the office for economy purposes to 64.

Alternatives Cited.

Dismissal of 47 married persons with wives or husbands in the service was declared the only "humane" course, and the only alternative to an "unjust and arbitrary" furloughing of the entire staff.

The statement disclosed the average A. G. O. salary is $1,452, including the 15 per cent cut. It charged the married couples involved in many instances receive more than this average, and, with but one or two exceptions, receive a higher pay than 12 per cent of the employes.

"There are 115 clerks in this office who receive a base pay of but $1,260 per annum (or, with the deduction of 15 per cent in salary and 3½ per cent for retirement, $1,001 a year, or but $84 a month)," the statement read. "Some of these are married and are attempting to support wives, and in some cases children or other dependents. Those who receive $1,440 base pay, and 133 clerks do receive such pay, receive a net pay of less than $100 a month, and many of these have families."

Salaries Compared.

The A. G. O. declared some of the married workers receive a combined pay larger than any employe in the office, and one of the married workers receives twice as much as the lower grade clerks compelled to support families on their income.

"It was considered in the best interests of all concerned to drop married employes, because not one would suffer the hardship that would follow furloughing or dropping of those of low salary whose sole means of support is the one small salary," A. G. O. officials concluded.

Skating Age!

Thieves Take 24 Pairs From Washington Hardware Store.

This is a skating age, as Raymond Kidwell, proprietor of a hardware store at 1311 Seventh street, northwest, can testify. But it is going too far.

Schools Bar Entz Children

Admission Refused Until Properly Vaccinated, Father Informed.

H. H. Entz, who caused guards to be placed at the doors of the Thomson School last spring because he insisted on his children, Barbara, 8, and David, 7, attending after school authorities refused admission because they had not been properly vaccinated, brought his children to the Gage School yesterday without a new vaccination certificate.

The children were admitted to the Gage School early in June after the father presented a vaccination certificate. Just before the term ended this was found unsatisfactory.

Yesterday Mr. Entz asked his children be transferred to a school in Georgetown because he now is living in Falls Church, Va. He was told they will not be admitted to any school until properly vaccinated.

Car Owners Sure Of 'Plenty' Letters

3,000 Tax Tags Unissued, Says Traffic Head.

License tag letters have reached X but there is no danger of the alphabet being exhausted this year, Traffic Director William A. VanDuzer said yesterday. Three thousand X tags are still unissued and 10,000 each of Y and Z are in reserve.

Then there are 10,000 L tags, VanDuzer pointed out, which have been withheld from circulation to prevent possible confusion. Last year these were carried by sightseeing cars. Now such vehicles display an S if capacity is more than eight persons or SS for smaller cars.

Already under a 30-day sentence for attacking his wife last August, James Otis Smith gathered more trouble unto himself yesterday when he launched a second assault upon his wife as she was testifying against him in Juvenile Court.

A warrant was issued charging him with assault, on which he will be tried Wednesday. Judge Kathryn Sellers, of Juvenile Court, gave Smith a year in jail on nonsupport charges after his wife had finished her testimony.

Sen. Fletcher Is Hurt as Auto And Truck Hit

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, was recovering last night from cuts and bruises on his hands and forehead, received when his sedan collided with a truck at Massachusetts avenue and Twelfth street northwest, yesterday morning.

The 74-year-old chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee was thrown against a window post. He was taken by the Fire Rescue Squad to his home at 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Harrison C. Jackson, 42, the Senator's chauffeur, and Joe R. Gleason, 460A H street, driver of the truck, were not arrested.

Joe N. Jones, colored, 20, 931 Westminster street, was bruised on his chest when an auto in which he was riding with Joe Gliss, 22, colored, same address, collided with a cab driven by Jack Darne, 38, 22 Fourth street, Takoma Park, yesterday.

Two colored men were slightly injured in a collision of two autos at Bladensburg road and the District line.

Salvation Army Aids Fewer Men

Transient men cared for at the Emergency Home of the Salvation Army, 479 C street northwest, decreased in July and August as compared to June, Maj. James Asher, divisional commander of the Salvation Army, reported yesterday.

In June there were 1,706 white and 604 colored, compared with 1,370 white and 564 colored in July and 1,389 white and 585 colored men in August.

White transients were given 30,171 meals, 13,452 night's lodgings, 351 garments and 422 pairs of shoes, while colored transients were given 16,243 meals, 6,631 night's lodgings.

Price of Milk Here Too High, Citizens Told

Declaring statements that milk in Washington is better and more sanitary than in other cities untrue, David Babp, recording secretary of the Federation of Citizens Association, told West End Citizens Association last night local distributors were issuing fallacious propaganda to uphold prices.

He said retail prices in Washington had been too high for years, though producers received no more than elsewhere.

Praising Senator King of Utah as a "sincere investigator," the speaker expressed hope he would press the investigation to the limit.

Mr. Babp further charged an attempt would be made through the milk distributors' code of fair competition to quash the investigation. He said the probe should be pushed to the limit regardless of possible NRA approval.

Distributors Plan Fight.

Milk distributors are preparing to fight proposed price increases for producers embodied in a code to be submitted to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Dairy farmers will ask price increases for basic milk from 26 to 29 cents a gallon; and for surplus milk from 20 to 22 cents a gallon. They want this increase made without a corresponding boost to the consumer.

Producers Directors Association met yesterday and approved the proposed increase. Basic milk is that bottled for consumers. Surplus milk is used for cream-making and for making dairy products.

"If the producers can get more money without causing an increase to the consumer, it will be the week's best trick," he declared.

In order to equalize effect of an increase to the producer, the association will propose a 5-cent bottle deposit on all milk sold in stores. Savings in bottle costs, they believe, will compensate for increase to the dairy farmer.

Montgomeryites to Meet.

Two hundred and fifty Montgomery County milk producers will meet tomorrow night at Rockville (Md.) Courthouse to take action concerning the milk situation in the District of Columbia.

Five producers will be selected to serve with the four Montgomery County members of the board of directors of the Milk Producers Association in studying the situation. Various other matters affecting welfare of county producers also will be acted upon.
